Roosevelt Steps Into Battle over The Hatch Act

Wants Law To Include State Workers Paid Out of Federal Funds

Moscow, March 6 (Wednesday AP)—The Red army continued today to close its grip on Finland, its commanders reporting with the capture of the town of Nuola, nine miles North of the besieged city.

Nuola is just east of Karis on the Viipuri-Sortavala highway.

The capture of two islands in the Gulf of Bothnia, one of them Rannar, just north of the Kola Peninsula, taken some days ago, also was reported as the Red contingents continued mopping up in the bay area.

Twenty-one Finnish airplanes were reported shot down in the aerial war.

By MAX HARRELSIN

At least fifty persons were killed and scores wounded in a small town in Central Finland yesterday when Russian planes executed their worst bombing raids of the war.

Direct hits were scored on a hospital, and one bomb dropped on a school building.

Several bombs, all effective, were dropped in the raid by thirty-five planes just after a party of five newspaper correspondents and photographers arrived in the town.

Military censorship forbids the attack, a sample of the air raid which Russia is pressing, came as the Finns with their air force had bombed and machine-gunned Red army detachments attempting to cross ice-crusted Viipuri bay. The Finns said they were holding the Russians on the outskirts of that battered town.

Roosevelt continues To Carry Questions About Third Term

Washington, March 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt continued today to carry questions about a third term. In response to a series of questions at a press conference he had returned from a Southern tour and he knew nothing about the newspapermen were talking.

Asked about a newspaper column stating K. Lindley, Washington Post, quoting the president as having told an unnamed Southern newspaperman that he wanted to be regarded Secretary Hull and man for the presidential election, the president said he did not know.

Asked whether he had talked with Senator Byrnes (D-SC) and asked him to read it to him, Byrnes said, the president's answer was supposed to be "Senator Cotton Ed" Smith (D-SC), administration critic.

Asked whether he had talked with Senator Smith, the president said the senate in investigating committee, which he did not identify, would have asked about that.

Asked whether he had talked with Senator Smith, the president said the senate in investigating committee, which he did not identify, would have asked about that.

Washington, March 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt stepped into the battle over the Hatch Act today, renewing his plea of last year that the law's prohibition against political activities by federal employees be extended to a large army of state workers paid out of federal funds.

While the president voiced his opinion at a press conference, the senate was beginning a battle over legislation by Senator Hatch (D-NM) to write such an extension into the law.

Senator Chandler (D-Ky) supported Hatch, warning that there would be a "real revolt" by the people unless the use of federal funds by officials to re-elect themselves is ended. The taxpayers' money, he said, is collected for services needed by the taxpayers, not "to perpetuate anybody in office."

Many Objections
His listeners recalled that a senatorial primary contest between Chandler and Senator Barkley (D-Ky) in 1938 was closely linked with the formulation of the original Hatch Act.

In 1938 Chandler was governor of Kentucky and sought the senate seat held by Senator Barkley, the Democratic floor leader. In the course of a bitter campaign, a Senate committee conducted an inquiry and said it found evidence of the misuse of political influence through the WPA on Barkley's behalf.

Barkley, in turn, charged that Chandler was misusing the state highway office and its employees. Barkley won, but Chandler came to the senate later upon the death of Senator Logan of Kentucky.

The extension legislation was battered today by objections from many quarters. Senator Minton (D-Ind), for example, said that it might give the federal government an opportunity to "control" purely state elections.

However, the criticism came in many instances from senators who intend to vote for the extension, but wish first to improve certain sections of the bill, and the supporters of the legislation were hardly apprehensive of the outcome.

Bills Political Activity
The measure would prohibit political activity by state employees who are paid in whole or part by federal funds. It would be enforced by the Civil Service Commission, and a penalty for infraction would be the withholding of federal funds. Since it would cover state highway employees, state social security employees, state public health officials and some others, its scope is broad.

The original Hatch Act was widely considered an anti-third term move, and had the almost solid support of Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats. The extension would cut into the political

Bill Passed by 88-0 Vote Would Create Conservancy District

Richmond, Va., Mar. 5 (AP)—The House of delegates today passed, 88-0, a bill authorizing the governor to enter into a compact with Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia for the creation of a Potomac Valley Conservancy District.

The bill, sponsored by delegates Thomas B. Stanley of Henry, J. Tinsley Coleman of Nelson, A. E. Stephens of Isle of Wight, C. G. Queensberry of Westmoreland, Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington and Maitland H. Bustard of Danville, now goes to the Senate.

It probably will be referred to the

Senator Tobey Hits Roosevelt On Census Dope

Charges President Is Displaying "Poor Taste" in Legislative Matter

Washington, March 5 (AP)—Accused by President Roosevelt of making a "political" row about 1940 census questions, Senator Tobey (R-NH) struck back tonight with a charge that the president was displaying "poor taste" by "obtruding himself" into a legislative matter.

Tobey is leading the fight to delete questions about personal income from the census on the ground they are an invasion of privacy. Asked about this at his press conference today, the president said:

"The whole thing is a political move. Everybody accredited to Congress knows that is the sole motive." He said he wondered whether any newspaperman present had any statistical information he wanted to hide from the government. The chief executive quickly added that he had nothing to hide and believed none of the newspapermen had.

On reporter asked about the census question "Have you ever been divorced?" Mr. Roosevelt said such information need not be supplied neighbors but probably was valuable to the census bureau in recording the curve of marriage and divorce.

Tobey's statement, issued later, pointed out that his resolution for the deletion of the question was pending before a Senate committee and added:

"It is another example of the executive obtruding himself in a purely legislative matter." After terming the president a "past master x x x as a purveyor and producer of politics," he said the White House statement "dodges the real issue and creates a smoke screen to cover it up."

"Thousands of people, from every

Finance committee, which already has heard an explanation of an identical senate bill, which is expected to be sidetracked in favor of the house measure.

The bill carries an appropriation of $2,400 per year as Virginia's part of the $30,000 called for in the proposed compact for financing a commission to administer the business of the conservancy district.

The district would include the area drained by the Potomac river and its tributaries and would be created with a view of abating existing pollution and controlling future pollution. Creation of the district has been authorized by Congress.

Five Italian Vessels Are Seized by Britain; Two Loaded with Nazi Coal

Steps Up Other Phases of Economic Warfare against Nazis by Announcing War Loan

By DREW MIDDLETON
London, March 5 (AP)—Britain today seized five Italian ships, at least two of them laden with German coal, in emphatic answer to a sharp Italian protest and stepped up other phases of her economic warfare against Germany by announcing a $300,000,000 (about $1,200,000,000) war loan and launching a determined campaign to increase her own exports.

Despite Italy's pointed warning of a severe strain on political and economic relations between the two powers by the newly enforced coal blockade, the Italian ships were escorted into contraband control base off Deal, Southeastern England, while a search was under way for other coal-bearing ships which slipped out of Rotterdam.

Twelve Ships Depart
In all twelve Italian ships have left Rotterdam in the last two days and four more are loading. They were taking on their cargoes in the Netherlands port when the British seizure order went into effect March 1.

Today's moves to further strangle German exports were accompanied by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir

Dies Attacked By Maverick

Charges He Practices Plain Cruelties on Fellow Human Beings

Washington, March 5 (AP)—Maury Maverick, mayor of San Antonio, Texas, said tonight that Rep. Dies (D-Texas) had grown in four years from a man who liked to play cruel practical jokes to one who got joy "out of practicing plain cruelties on fellow human beings."

The mayor, an administration supporter who formerly sat with Dies in the House, lashed out at the leader of the House Committee on un-American activities in an address prepared for delivery to the descendants of the American revolution.

"What about Martin Dies personally?" Maverick asked. "I know him; I can give my opinion. In the first place, he is financially honest. The fact that he may make money on lectures and magazine articles is nothing wrong. And I say frankly that were he a soldier in a war, I would not be afraid to trust him. I would not suspect his

Government Nabs Policy Operators In Gambling Drive

Three Jones Brothers, Chicago Negroes, Caught on Income Tax Evasion

Chicago, March 5 (AP)—The policy wheel stopped on an unlucky number for the three affluent Jones brothers of Chicago's Harlem today when the government charged them with evading more than $1,000,000 in income taxes.

The indictments, first in the policy field during the current investigation of incomes of alleged Chicago gambling kingpins, also accused Thomas R. Gilson, a lawyer and former federal deputy collector of internal revenue, with aiding and abetting the Joneses in the alleged evasion.

Several hours later William R. Johnson, allegedly one of the top men in Chicago's gambling syndicate, surrendered at the federal building, was fingerprinted and posted $50,000 surety bond on an indictment returned Friday charging he owed the government $2,232,497 in income taxes, penalties and interest. He made no statement.

Government agents said the three negro brothers, Edward P. Jones, McKissack McHenry Jones and George P. Jones, came from Mississippi twenty years ago, worked as railroad dining car waiters and then entered the policy game, profits of which rapidly pushed them up to a plane of "lavish living."

Agents said they owned expensive automobiles and had chauffeurs, maintained a luxurious home and country estates, Edward, at least, frequently traveled to France where he would rent a villa at Cannes for the season, they related.

U. S. District Attorney William J. Campbell said the Jones' policy headquarters in the heart of Brownstown had a daily "take" of $10,000 to $15,000.

The special grand jury's indictments charged evasion of taxes as follows:

Edward P. Jones, $803,650.33 for 1933 to 1938, inclusive; McKissack McHenry Jones, $123,497.77 same years; George P. Jones, $93,306.49 for 1933 to 1937, inclusive.

All were named in each of three indictments, charging evasion and aiding and abetting one another. Gilson was accused of aiding and abetting each of the Joneses during three years he was a federal employee and three years after he left government service in 1936.

Bench warrants were issued for the arrest of all four.

Others accused in the federal drive to collect income levies from "big timers" are William R. (Billy) Skidmore, under two indictments, and Andrew J. (Red) Creighton, alleged manager of Johnson gambling points. Skidmore's lawyer, William Goldstein, was indicted on a charge of "corrupt perjury."

Hagerstown Council Member Succumbs

Hagerstown, March 5 (AP)—W. Keller Nigh, Sr., 62, a member of the city council since 1933, died here late today from a heart attack following an illness of one day.

Mr. Nigh, a Republican, was elected a member of council from the fourth ward in 1933 and had served continuously since. He is survived by his wife, a son and two daughters, all of Hagerstown.

Irvine Lacks Majority, Polls only 45 percent; Harper's Vote Surprises

Conlon Leads Council Ticket; Fradiska Noses Out Orr in Nip and Tuck Race for Fourth Place

Thomas S. Post surprised City Hall forces in yesterday's primary by running close on Mayor Harry Irvine's heels while Post and Janitor John Harper together polled fifty-five per cent of the votes.

Total results from the city's twenty precincts showed that Irvine was given 3,333 votes; Post, 2,869; and Harper, 1,142. Mayor Irvine beat out Post by 464 votes for top honors. Harper was eliminated.

Mayor Irvine polled 45.4 per cent of the votes cast for mayor. Post polled 39.1 per cent. Harper polled 15.5 per cent.

Forty-five per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots for mayor yesterday.

Conlon Leads Ticket
Thomas S. Conlon once again lead the entire ticket by piling up 3,795 votes for a chance to run for City Council again, with Reynolds, Edwards, Fradiska, Orr, Wismyer, O'Rourke, and Racey winning nominations in the order named.

Council Candidates John H. Pike and Robert L. Meyers were eliminated in the primary.

As a result of yesterday's primary, political speculation immediately swung to two points. The two big questions raised last night were:

1—To whom will Harper's 1,142 supporters swing in the election on March 19?

2—And what will the 8,922 voters who failed to cast ballots in yesterday's primary do?

As was expected, incumbent Commissioners Conlon, Reynolds and Edwards led the council primary ticket in yesterday's race with comfortable margins.

And as was also expected, a tight battle ensued between Fradiska and Orr for fourth place on the ticket with Fradiska getting a slight edge.

Harper Runs Well
One of the biggest surprises of the day was the showing made by Harper, whose 1,142 backers may prove to be a big factor in the election on March 19.

Bethlehem Steel Skeptical about Munitions Boom

New York, March 5 (AP)—The Bethlehem Steel Corp., a leading armament builder, turned a skeptical eye today on chances of a war munitions boom in the United States.

Eugene G. Grace, president, said in his annual report to stockholders:

"Your management believes that under present conditions it is not wise to invest the capital of your corporation in additional facilities for the production of munitions or to use its present facilities for that purpose at the expense of its commercial business."

One of the biggest recipients of war orders in the World War, both from Europe and the United States, Bethlehem in peace shifted from the sword to the commercial plow in a large way.

In the past eleven years, according to its own figures, Bethlehem has spent $194,000,000 expanding and modernizing plants for the commercial market, including the construction of costly mechanized rolling mills.

The shipbuilding divisions have shared in both navy and merchant marine orders so that unfilled orders in 1939 rose to record figures for peace-time, reaching an estimated $287,002,024, at the close of the year.

As previously reported, net income for 1939 increased to $24,638,384, equal to $5.75 a share on the common stock, from $5,250,239 in 1938, when nothing was earned for the common after preferred dividends.

adjoining hangars, of similar size and cost, had been averted.

Among other officials at hand was Mayor LaGuardia, who led the long campaign for the construction of the great airport, which was built by WPA labor and is near the New York World's Fair Grounds, at North Beach, Queens.

While an official statement as to the cause of the fire awaited investigation, William H. Peters, a WPA laborer, said it had sprung up as a "small blaze" in a paint locker. Police Inspector John LaGuardia said it appeared accidental.

No airplanes were inside.

The flames apparently leaped directly from the paint locker to the wood scaffolding which ringed and criss-crossed the great building. The bulk of the damage was caused not in the destruction of this super

Hanger Was Under Lease to Trans-Continental and Western Lines

New York, March 5 (AP)—A million-dollar fire late today swept an incomplete block-long hanger at LaGuardia Field, the city's new $40,000,000 municipal airport.

The hanger, valued at $1,250,000, was under lease to Trans-Continental and Western Air and was to have been put in operation late this month. It was the center of a bank of three.

Early tonight, while red-hot steel slabs from the roof and sides of the vast sprawling building still were crashing heavily to earth in thin showers of sparks it appeared that the initial peril to the two

War Department Wants To Sell Surplus Material

Offers To Sell Guns and Ammunition to Non- Belligerent Nations

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
Washington, March 5 (AP)—The War department offered today to sell, to Latin American and other non-belligerent nations, artillery, rifles and other surplus war material which cost originally several hundred million dollars.

A list of such surplus weapons, described as "usable" though they date from the World War, was disclosed following an announcement that ninety long-range six-inch field pieces had already been sold to Brazil. The price was not made public.

President Roosevelt announced last month that certain army and navy munitions would be offered to neutrals and the list was prepared at his direction. Finland was barred from the offer because it is at present engaged in hostilities.

The sale to Brazil was said officially to be the first such sale of army munitions to a foreign government since the World War. Some 2,500 rifles were reported reliably, however, to have been transferred recently to Haiti, and the Philippine government was supplied with rifles and mountain guns for its new army after the commonwealth was set up in 1935 to prepare for independence.

Several Latin American governments, including Chile, have inquired since the European war started whether American munitions in storage for more than two decades were for sale. Sweden also has made such inquiries.

The 1920 national defense act authorized the secretary of war to sell arms which were not needed by the army, and for which there was no adequate domestic market. The navy was reported, however, to have decided that further legislation would be required to dispose of warships which possess military value.

The war department's for sale list was prepared under the direction of Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson. Officials explained that the surplus munitions had all been displaced by later models. No prices were given but it was understood the general policy was to ask less than a third of the original cost.

Included were some 100,000 Enfield rifles out of some 1,800,000 models of this shoulder weapon now in storage. Other weapons listed included:

- More than 70,000 machine guns, mostly for use in war planes, including Lewis, Marlin and Vickers makes.
- Approximately 300, 75 millimeter field guns of a British model, unused since the army standardized the French 75.
- More than 250 eight-inch howitzers of British design, along with a limited amount of ammunition.
- Approximately twenty-five heavy siege guns.
- More than 200 three-inch Stokes mortars, used in trench warfare, along with upwards of 100,000 rounds of ammunition.

Germans Accused Of Executing Polish Students

Paris, March 5 (AP)—The Polish Emigre government, in an advance resume of data which is to go into a "white book," tonight accused the German conquerors of executing schoolboys, men and women en masse as part of a deliberate campaign to exterminate the native population of Poland.

The German government previously had denied Polish charges of mass executions in the occupied regions.

The official communique cited a long list of alleged atrocities and called them "worthy of the worst tyrants of antiquity."

Among the crimes the Emigre government said had been committed were:

- The shooting at Bydgoszcz of 136 Polish schoolboys, twelve and thirteen years old.
- "Massacre" at the same place up to the end of December of 6,000 Polish men and women.
- Deportation from Gdynia of 350 Polish hostages and their execution, after they were forced to dig their own graves. Among those executed were listed the burgomaster, the port superintendent, chief judge of the district court and the manager of the local Bank of Poland branch.

Schoolboy Saves One Child

East Brady, Pa., March 5 (AP)—A seventeen-year old high school sophomore saved the life of the East Brady postmaster's son today as a third boy was drowned in an ice tragedy on the Allegheny river sixty miles above Pittsburgh.

Russell Klein, the sophomore, saw the ice break on the river, tumbling Lonnie McCanna, 8, and James May, 12, son of postmaster James May, into the stream.

Rushing to the site over the weak ice, Klein fell in beside the two and managed to hold young May's head above the water while the McCanna boy was swept under the ice.

A passerby finally laid planks on the ice and brought the two to shore. The postmaster watched from ashore, unaware his son was involved.

Dues Unpaid, Firemen Won't Fight Fire

While flames consume a one-story frame office building at Pine Lawn, a suburb of St. Louis, Mo., volunteer firemen of Pine Lawn stand idly by. The fire department secretary explained his volunteers refused to fight the flames because the owner of the property had not paid $1.25 in dues. Damage was estimated at $3,000 or $4,000.

Scores Wounded

fractures of the ice of Viipuri bay, opened up when bombs and artillery fired on the attackers coming west in an attempt to encircle the city, unofficial Finnish reports said.

The Finnish high command said fighting was in progress among the inlets at the mouth of the bay, and the Finnish flag still waved from Viipuri's historic castle.

An official communique on the Russian bombing attacks said "the enemy pilots' brutal bombing of hospitals and helpless patients continues."

"On Tuesday, bombing was, if possible, more raw and brutal than ever before. Altogether three hospitals were bombed during the day. In one hospital more than ten patients were killed and in another at least four.

"Many patients were wounded during these raids.

"Also the bombing of civilians caused many casualties. Bombs were dropped among other places, on Mikkeli, where many people were killed and wounded; also Kuopio and Lahti. In both of these towns, according to reports so far, four people were killed and many wounded. In southwestern Finland bombs were dropped on Forssa. Enemy pilots opened machinegun fire against a passenger train."

Immediate objectives of the Russian attacks outside Viipuri appeared to be Virolahti and Haapasaari islands, for the purpose of starting general operations along Finland's Southeastern coast.

Although heavy fighting reached the ruined city outskirts, Finns asserted the Russians still had not entered Viipuri proper, despite continued attempts to draw a net around the city.

(A Russian communique on Monday's action reported several towns on the Western mainland and numerous Viipuri Bay islands had been captured, among them the Tronsund Naval fortress.)

City Is Doomed

Though Finns unofficially admitted that the fall of the city was inevitable, the obstinate defenders said they had fought off fierce attacks from the Southwest, where the Russians had approached closest, as well as the trans-bay thrusts.

With main interest centered along this Western rim of the Karelian Isthmus the Finnish high command said there was "harassing activity by artillery" on the Eastern end of the Isthmus front where continued Soviet pounding has failed to break through the Taipale sector.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga fighting eased up, but the Finnish high command said 500 Russians had been killed in the Kuhmo area, mid-day along the Russian-Finnish frontier.

A correspondent for the newspaper Helsinki Sanomat reported from the Ladoga front that Finns had picked up a wireless message from a trapped Russian detachment appealing to Moscow for help. The appeal, sent by a political commissar, said the detachment was "doomed" unless help was forthcoming at once.

It was in this sector that the Finns last week reported destruction of the eighteenth Russian army division and the thirty-fourth Tank Corps, a feat which today brought a congratulatory message from President Kyastti Kallio.

The Finns reported that Russian air activity had tapered off to "a few flights" over the Northeast Ladoga front and the Isthmus war zone and that three Soviet bombers had been shot down.

In one sense, they are caught in a predicament of President Roosevelt's making. When he signed the original act, he issued a statement saying that its principles should be extended to state employees. Hatch readily agreed to the idea, and the pending bill is an effort to do so insofar as the federal government can.

Senator Wiley (R-Wis) suggested that the Communist witnesses be granted fifteen minutes and Senators Neely (D-W Va.), Austin (R-Vt.), and Connally (D-Tex) nodded approval.

Maryland Congressmen Face Primary Fights

Baltimore, March 5 (AP)—Lines were fairly well drawn today in Maryland's Democratic congressional primary campaigns, with all signs pointing to the Eastern Shore as the scene of the real battleground of the May 6 election.

All of the six incumbent Democratic representatives except two—Rep. William D. Byron in the sixth district and Rep. Thomas D'Allesandro Jr. in the third—have formally announced for reelection, and Byron, and D'Allesandro have been doing plenty of unofficial campaigning.

In the first district, embracing all nine Eastern Shore counties, six candidates are waging a bitter fight, much of it undercover. Six counties have favorite sons in the contest, including Rep. David J. Ward of Wilcox, the incumbent.

Rep. Center of Struggle

Storm center of the struggle at the moment, however, is State Senator Dudley G. Roe instead of Ward, Roe, a Queen Anne's county, has been the chief target of blasts from Herbert Balch, Talbot County; Olin R. Higgins of Dorchester and State Senator Thomas F. Johnson of Worcester, whose camps have developed a "Beat Roe" slogan.

A newcomer in the first district campaign is E. Moore Lee of Chesapeake City, retired army officer who gives Cecil county representation among the candidates.

In the Third District, D'Allesandro faces another hot fight with former Rep. Vincent L. Palmisano, who defeated by a narrow margin in 1938.

Rep. William P. Cole who announced yesterday for re-election in the second district, seeks his seventh term over opposition of former State Senator John D. C. Duncan of Baltimore county who entered the race a year ago.

In the Fourth District, Rep. Ambrose J. Kennedy and Mayor Howard W. Jackson will renew a long political feud. Jackson has indicated he would oppose Kennedy's reelection vigorously, backing John A. Meyer, a former magistrate, for the post. Also in the field is Stewart Brown.

Thus far, Rep. Lansdale G. Sasser is without opposition in the Fifth district, and in the Sixth, Rep. Byron is likewise unopposed to date, with most of the campaigning done by four Republicans.

The latter are Walter Johnson of Montgomery county, famed "Big Train" of baseball; A. Charles Stewart of Allegany county; State Senator Robert B. Kimble of Allegany county and Frank R. Long of Montgomery county.

In three other districts, unopposed Republicans are in the field—P. Kirk Maddix of Crisfield in the First; William J. Stockdale of Baltimore in the Fourth and John Philip Hill, former representative from the Third district, in the Fifth. Congressional candidates may file until April 16. Those now in the contest can withdraw at any time until April 6.

were stricken from the hearing record by Chairman Van Nuys (D-Ind.).

Van Nuys, himself a sponsor of anti-lynching legislation, warned the witness repeatedly against referring to members of congress and threatened at one point to call Capitol police and have him taken away.

"You crashed the gates of this committee just to try and send out Communist propaganda," Van Nuys declared. "You have done more harm to prevent passage of this bill than anyone who has ever appeared."

Before Davis was allowed to testify, Van Nuys told other senators present that Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party, had insisted that Communist representatives be permitted to appear. The senator added:

"I don't care a rap what Earl Browder or his whole party thinks of this or any other bill."

Senator Wiley (R-Wis) suggested that the Communist witnesses be granted fifteen minutes and Senators Neely (D-W Va.), Austin (R-Vt.), and Connally (D-Tex) nodded approval.

and protect a baseball pool; Chief Deputy Sheriff Bernard E. McGrath; Carl J. Staebler, head of the civil division of the sheriff's office, and Alfred J. Garska, president of suburban Grosse Pointe Park.

Ouster proceedings against McCrea have been instituted by the state, with a hearing set for March 26. Tomorrow McCrea, Colburn and others face an examination on the baseball pool charge.

Today's indictments deal with alleged graft in Wayne county outside of Detroit. Among the non-officials arrested are Gustav Pines, Detroit investment broker accused of being "an agent and employee" of Wilcox in handling of graft money; Charles Mocer and James Mocer, former operators of Club Ackum Northwest of Detroit; Sam (Smoky) Solomon of Hamtramck; Clarence De Walleit of Ecorse; Benjamin D. Landsburg of Dearborn, former Inkster chief of police; and Victor Otto of Grosse Pointe Park.

Federal agents notified Judge Ferguson that De Walleit has been sought on a charge of bribing three customs officers in 1928. McCrea, whose attempt to send a party of sheriff's deputies to the grand jury rooms last night resulted in a call for police riot squads and the placing of a strong police guard about the premises, renewed his efforts tonight to investigate charges that five men were beaten and mistreated by the jury's investigating staff.

In a letter to Judge Ferguson, McCrea asked that the complainants be permitted to view the investigators so they might try to identify the men they accused. Saying he was informed the grand jury maintained a "torture chamber" to obtain desired testimony from witnesses, McCrea asked Police Commissioner Frank D. Eaman to notify policemen attached to the grand jury "that if these tactics are true, they are improper and they may expect me to do my full and complete duty as prosecutor."

Eaman replied that the officers were "working under the jurisdiction of the court" and that he was "not giving any orders" to them. McCrea heatedly denied charges by O'Hara and Ferguson that the deputies were attempting to seize grand jury records. Wilcox was arrested today by Dr. Albert A. Hughes, Wayne county coroner who is the only county official with power to arrest a sheriff. Wilcox complained that "I am sicker than goat," but added that "I am going to face the music."

Dr. Hughes said Wilcox "has no business being up and around, but he told me that he wanted to come to court for fear somebody would think he was faking illness."

Hall Says Third Term Resolution Is Non-partisan

Washington, March 5 (AP)—Rep. Edwin A. Hall (R-NY) told the House solemnly today that his resolution barring presidents from third terms was offered in a "purely non-partisan" spirit but that Democrats laughed and acted as if they didn't believe him.

During the day the Senate Commerce committee voted ten to five to delay action until next Tuesday because Chairman Bailey (D-NO) said "many members want to read the record of the hearings."

Senator Clark (D-Mo) said the committee delay was a "filibuster" because the census was to begin April 1.

Famous Leipzig Spring Fair Opens

Vast Quantities of German Made Goods on Sale to Foreigners

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
Leipzig, March 5 (AP)—The famous Leipzig spring fair, with vast quantities of German manufactured goods on sale to foreigners but not to Germans, is aimed at selling a little propaganda along with the Reich's industrial products.

To the thousands of foreigners visiting the exposition Germany is reiterating the Nazi conviction that Germany will win the war.

Cloth banners hung across streets and from buildings bear the legends "we will never capitulate" and "we stand as one."

Liberally posted around the city are red placards with Adolf Hitler's words "in reality this war is here only because England wanted it."

Every effort is made to convince the visitor that Germany would be a good business partner.

Visitors, particularly from South-eastern Europe, are being assured the Reich is better to deal with than the Allies.

How far the German trade war fought with the same bitterness as sea battles, will be effective remained a question, but there was no doubt about the interest being displayed by businessmen who came from what Germany calls the "unblockable frontiers to the East."

In twenty-four large exhibition buildings are displayed great quantities of industrial products. The great accumulations of fabrics and textiles mean comparatively little to German buyers since the German with his ration card cannot purchase many such things. Optical and scientific instruments are here in profusion, but they are available to the German only if he can produce an official certificate that he needs one urgently.

There are many rubber products, mostly of excellent artificial rubber, but under war regulations they are released to Germans in dribsles.

No such restrictions bind foreigners, however. Anything can be had for currency or for better transactions.

The German citizen is foregoing cameras, machines, soap, and cloth so that the Reich may swap those commodities for fodder and ores from Russia, oil from Rumania and butter from anyone willing to trade.

Not one visitor from the United States, much less a buyer, had registered in the first three days of the fair. But the Stars and Stripes are seen occasionally in the beflagged city. In one exhibit building there was even a little British flag pointed on a sign saying English was spoken.

"I guess we forgot to change that," an attendant observed.

Four Men Rescued From Coal Mine

Stoyestown, Pa., March 5 (AP)—Four men trapped in a mine by a cave-in of seventy-five or eighty tons of rock, shale and dirt, whiled away the hours today by singing and digging coal to keep warm.

"We could hear the fellows on the other side working," explained Owen Dunmeyer, 45, operator of the mine, "so when we got cold we started to dig some coal to keep from freezing."

By means of a makeshift telephone the men inside were able to talk with their rescuers. Dunmeyer, his only son, Ray, 20, William McVicker, 60, and McVicker's son, Robert, 19, were entombed five hours while scores of neighbors and friends dug cautiously through the twenty-foot long rockfall.

Mine Inspector F. W. Cunningham, of Somerset, who arrived and directed the rescue operations, told the men inside the mine not to try to dig their way out for fear of causing more falls. He blamed the melting snow after freezes with causing the cave-in.

The mine shaft runs straight into the hillside and the fall occurred about 150 feet from the entrance. A mine pony was forced to spend the night in the mine, the opening through which the miners escaped not being wide enough for the animal.

Ernest Dunmeyer, another son of the operator, discovered the cave-in just after hauling out a load of coal with another pony.

THIS WAY TO PARIS!

Rumors of a German offensive through the Low Countries have been current ever since the war began. With the approach of spring, the Allies were reported to be strengthening fortifications behind the French-Belgian border and concentrating troops there—just in case. The map shows the famous Von Schlieffen plan, followed by Von Kluck in 1914 (indicated by white arrow). Under this plan each invading army protects the right flank of the one to the south.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

Whatever its real purport, Rome's harshly worded protest against the Anglo-French blockade policy came at an especially embarrassing moment for the Allies.

It was carefully timed by Mussolini, who has again proven himself an accomplished performer at the international poker table, although his real purposes remain obscure.

The war sap is rising in Europe under the urge of approaching spring. In France, particularly, there is greater tensely over the possibilities of a German attack than at any time since the outbreak of the conflict.

The French and their British colleagues are concentrated from Switzerland to the North sea behind vast fortifications, braced to meet either a direct Nazi onslaught on the Maginot line or an attempt to flank it through neutral Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

Just at this moment, Mussolini steps forward with his protest over British interception of cargoes of German coal destined for Italy. He virtually reiterates the Nazi charges that Allied blockade policies are both illegal and inhumane.

Despite the vigor of the Italian protest, however, there is much doubt that Mussolini has any notion of intervening in the war on the side of Germany. It is recalled that Italy's attitude toward Berlin chilled rapidly when the Nazis struck up a friendship with Moscow.

Rome has missed no opportunity to disclose its determination to block Russian economic and territorial ambitions.

Nevertheless, Il Duce has held cards that seem to demand some patriotism, any more than any German could have suspected the patriotism of Hitler in fighting what he thought was a foreign enemy of Germany.

"But what I sadly deplore is that Martin Dies does not give the same credit to Americans of equal patriotism. He is willing to smear men and women by the thousands, and in a manner strange to American ideals and constitutional practices. He is willing to pin the badge of un-Americanism, by unfair and cruel methods, on any one else, if this puts him to the top."

Henry T. Hunt, a lawyer in the treasury's procurement division, who is president of the Washington Chapter of the organization which Maverick addressed, described that organization as a liberal group of descendants of those who fought in the American Revolution. It is distinct from the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution.

Circulars distributed in behalf of the meeting listed among its sponsors Secretary Ickes, Oscar L. Chapman, assistant secretary of the interior; Gerald D. Reilly, solicitor of the labor department; Senators Wheeler (D-Mont), Pepper (D-Fla.) and Murray (D-Mont), and Reps. Coffee (D-Wash.), Marcantonio (A-NY), Casey (D-Mass), Keller (D-Ill), Geyer (D-Calif), O'Day (D-NY) and Hook (D-Mich.).

There was no move yet by the foreign office to answer Italy's bitter protest against the blockade, delivered in London Sunday. Authorized circles said, however, that it was being examined and that a tentative reply was being framed.

"The government is not inclined to view the matter as a 'crisis' or anything like it," one source close to the foreign office commented.

Rome, March 5 (AP)—Britain's detention of Italian coal ships was received silently in Italy tonight, although the government only yesterday registered an emphatic protest against the halting of German coal exports.

Government sources, declared they were not officially informed of the seizures by the British contraband control, declined to make any prediction as to what the Italian reaction might be.

The official news agency, Stefani, did not immediately issue a report on the seizure. The Rome radio mentioned it without comment.

Late Rome newspapers carried the story, but also refrained from comment.

Income Tax Study Will Be Made Rawls Committee

Will Wait until March To Begin an Exhaustive five Analysis

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP)—Studies aimed at reducing the state income tax in 1941 have been instituted by the Rawls committee on state finance, Gov. E. R. O'Connor said today.

The governor reported the committee was waiting until completion of collections March 15 to begin an exhaustive analysis of the collection of the new income tax.

The committee has enlisted services of University of Maryland statistical analysts to help with studies.

The university experts were to prepare a statistical breakdown of returns for analysis by the committee.

With actual figures, based on tax in operation, the committee will prepare its recommendations for 1941, the governor said.

"The Rawls committee will have a comprehensive tax plan for submission to the 1941 legislature," O'Connor explained.

Finally it will include recommendations designed to eliminate any inequalities found in the actual collection of the income tax law.

"This particularly applies to hardships imposed on persons in the lower income brackets," O'Connor defended the present tax law as fairer than the levies.

There has been criticism of the clause imposing a check cent tax on unearned income, he pointed out that the tax is one-half mills tax on the average securities actually represent the average 8.9 per cent tax on equity and the taxpayer is actually, an off under the present law.

O'Connor also disclosed that a 1941 tax program to be submitted to the legislature largely would come from the committee's report by W. Lee Rawls, leader of the governor's group that prepared the 1939 fiscal program.

O'Connor said the Rawls committee would probably not recommend the legislative council in which the 1941 tax program is being pointed out that the committee is composed of fiscal experts who spend their time exclusively on fiscal matters, while the job of council is more general in character.

Residents of Shenandoah Are Seeking Damages

Shenandoah, Pa., March 5 (AP)—Determined mine-town men demanded damages and safeguards against cave-ins in their undermined homes.

They gathered for a meeting in the face of a state Gov. Arthur H. James the mining rights decisions may property rights of the people of Shenandoah about as fleet as a cloud.

Meanwhile, widening cracks in walls and floors of the mountainous section of slowly Shenandoah—on a mountain flanked by a mountain—fanned fears that damage to teen-block district would be more than $1,000,000.

Amid intermittent rumbling the steady sagging that early yesterday, engineers estimated the underlying honeycomb workings 1,000 feet below the surface and reported finding nothing immediately alarming.

Families returned to their cracked houses today and repairs. Most of the houses still are without heat, lack water because of broken pipes. Four schools, the post office and several business places are closed—condemned as unsafe until they can be repaired or replaced.

It hinted that monster publicity and propaganda campaigns soon would be started to make "made in Britain" better known.

Besides publicity and propaganda, the council will consider market information services and joint marketing. There also is a possibility that further barter trade agreements, such as those with the United States, may be developed.

It was learned that the coal cargoes of the impounded Italian ships or the money equivalent will be returned to Italy at the end of the war.

Lupino Reduces "By Prayer," Writes Music for a Rainy Day

ROBBIN COONS
Feature Service Writer

There may be more than simple reducing formulas than Ida Lupino's but on record. "I did it," says Ida, her big eyes wide. "I was sitting before an open fire, I'd come home and actor Edward G. Robinson had bought soon after marriage. "I was slim in green-and-gold pajamas, her dark hair was a snood held by a red hair. The hair is one of the changes. I thought to be a peroxide blonde. I combed it, and she let it go. "I was praying for wasn't loss some of it; it was for gain in Hollywood as a chubby girl," she says. "That's what I like, too. Peroxide blonde is a good face, and dark eyes gave away the peroxide. "I was not a line in that face. "I was a character. No wonder she was so popular. "I was married to mother (the actress Lillian Russell) and she said, 'don't you try praying?' I did. "I'd pray, 'Dear God, I want some character in this 1940 film, that's all I did—and it came. I've got lines, and I'm not afraid any more. I used to be a fat girl and now I weigh 110 lbs. I'm almost worried about it. "I'm praying now that I can stop. "I'm looking very lovely, but she says, 'have you think so. "I'm terribly hard to photograph," she says. "This bump on my forehead, this retreating nose, this neck, a checkbone—oh, I take a lot of things to look well on the screen. "I was in 'The Light That Comes' when I won my first screen contract. I was looking unkempt, mean, and generally unpleasant. "After she came to Hollywood as a candidate for the role of a woman in 'Wonderland,' she began making studios for a chance to be something real." She didn't get a contract, but she got a contract. "I was going to do 'characters' which by her husband's. "I was really clicked until he played the 'Man in the Iron Mask,' which he played both a conventional hero and a strange, psychopathic villain. Goebbels Predicts Nazi Victory As He Opens Big Leipzig Fair

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

Leipzig, March 5 (AP)—Leipzig's great international fair, giving an impressive picture of Germany's industrial strength in the midst of war, was opened Sunday by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in a spirited speech reiterating the Nazi theme of German invincibility.

Goebbels characterized the fair as a fort on the Reich's economic front reflecting the greatness of the commercial structure expected to contribute to ultimate victory on the war front. "Asserting that the great trade routes still are open to Germany, Goebbels declared that the Reich is trying to develop its commerce naturally—a procedure which he said would prove more effective and lasting than 'the political buying which Britain has been doing in all parts of the world.'"

Germans were obviously proud of the fact that eighteen neutral countries, fifteen of which are represented by government exhibits, are participating in the fair.

Bellies Blockade
The presence of the foreign exhibits was generally hailed as evidence that Germany has not been cut off from the world by the Allied sea blockade, which spokesmen said was troublesome but incapable of inflicting mortal injury on the Reich.

All the southeastern European countries were represented, with the Yugoslavian exhibit outstripping all others in size. The fair was only slightly smaller than last year's, the number of exhibitors totaling 6,600 as compared with 6,682 in 1939.

Industrial exhibits emphasized adjustment to wartime conditions by stressing the elimination of waste. One exhibit, for instance, showed twenty-seven ways to make good use of waste paper.

Shining Stockings Shown
Another wartime touch was an exhibit of women's stockings which shine at night, thus helping to avert blackout accidents.

Goebbels, who spoke in the great Leipzig music hall, said that the "real measure" of Germany's wealth was the industry of the population. In the military field, he said, Germany was unbeatable because its economy was sound and "our leaders more than a match for our foes."

Editorial Analyzes The Why of Crime

Tehachapi, Calif. (AP)—An editorial writer in the Clarion, a paper published at California's prison for women, analyzes the motives that land girls in prison. She finds that what they seek when they go into crime on their own or in company with boy friends is as follows:

"A few cheap dresses, cocky hats, a fur coat, buying half a dozen boxes of silk stockings at once, dancing slippers to match each dress, and an alluring negligee."

"Doing the town, all the night spots, drinking for the house, showing off because the boy friend has

Starling Invasion Starts Something

Oklahoma City (AP)—When thousands of starlings invaded Oklahoma City it didn't take the people who write letters to editors very long to offer solutions. Within a week they suggested:

That sleigh bells be tied near where the birds roost and that a night watchman be hired to ring the bells "all hours of the night."

This, the writer said, would discourage the birds.

That corn meal and whisky be fed the birds until they are drunk. "Then," said the writer, "the law could get them for vagrancy and being drunk in public."

That starling meat be popularized so that the Oklahoma City population would start gunning for the birds, thus "liquidating" them.

Two Californians wrote poems that sympathized with the birds.

The Road to Peace—or War?

EXTREME CAUTION will have to be exercised lest America's well-intended diplomatic inquiries, economic proposals and attempts to "unify" neutral opinion shall cause this country to wade too far into the international mess and become dangerously involved in a war-breeding situation.

It is ideally inspiring, of course, to contend that America is an integral part of the world and therefore should assume its share of responsibility and leadership. However, the extent to which Uncle Sam's fingers were burned during a previous attempt to save all mankind at least should serve as a restraining reminder.

Many observers think they see a repetition of the course that brought this country into war two and a half decades ago. These critics point to Sumner Welles as a second Colonel House, and contend that the Hull post-war program is, in certain basic essentials, comparable to the famous Fourteen Points of Woodrow Wilson.

While argument by analogy has admitted weaknesses, developments of the last few months strongly suggest that the United States should start stepping gingerly and circumspectly in connection with all international maneuvers that threaten to create, gradually but none the less surely, a web of entanglements from which ultimate escape will be very difficult if not impossible.

Public opinion in the United States is not ready to concede that another effort should be made to save the world for democracy when everything indicates that such an inspired course might simply lead to more unpaid war debts, further slaughter of young Americans on foreign soil and a new peace betrayal at the hands of Europe's poker-playing cynics.

This country's greatest danger at the moment is that of being misled by delusions of grandeur and misplaced confidences like those which led to the ultimate downfall of Woodrow Wilson. It can only be fervently hoped that the danger will not be unduly aggravated by seemingly innocent moves that nevertheless entail the tragic risks of war involvement.

Historical Example

THE REIGN of Queen Elizabeth is now generally regarded as a golden age in English history.

Before it ended, trade and commerce had reached new peaks; daring and intrepid explorers had opened up new frontiers in strange and distant lands.

But it didn't begin that way. There was a spirit of defeatism abroad in England then as there is among the New Dealers of our country today. England seemed hopelessly buried under a mountain of debt.

Elizabeth's ministers tried first this and then that. Finally, when all of the preposterous perunas they concocted failed to bring relief, they decided to seek the advice of a hard-headed, practical business man.

So they sent for Sir Thomas Gresham.

"How," they asked him, "can England get free of its debt?"

"By paying it and contracting no new debts," he snapped.

This answer nearly bowled over the ministers. But after they had recovered from the shock and thought it over, they decided to follow his advice. And England became powerful, prosperous and rich.

We hope the New Deal defeatists and the spend and spend, tax and tax boys read this and profit by the example.

Some Revolver Information

THE AVERAGE PERSON doesn't know much about the firearms that are in ordinary use. Charles P. Stewart, Washington correspondent, brings this to mind in pointing out the errors that are all too frequently made in reference to revolvers.

We read constantly, Stewart says, of gunmen who are "armed with automatic revolvers."

Now a revolver, Stewart explains, is a pistol, with a revolving cylinder. An automatic is a handgun which feeds cartridges into the barrel from a clip in the butt, and it no more revolves than a repeating rifle does.

There is also frequent mention, Stewart says, of a racketeer, or other criminal, caught by the G-men, with a "smoking weapon in his mitt." One shows himself to be quite militarily unsophisticated, Stewart says, not to be aware that nothing but smokeless powder is available in the present era.

The information is passed along, not in the anticipation that any readers may be planning to go gunning, but as a matter of information in the interest of accuracy.

The Juggernaut

THE TAX JUGGERNAUT continues to roll along—and to crush people as it goes. A report by the Federation of Tax Administrators shows that state tax collections of 1939 increased $774,896,000 over those of 1937.

Aside from the payroll tax, which brought $450,000,000 more revenue, the rise in receipts was due mainly to increased revenue from prevailing taxes rather than to the adoption of new taxes, the Federation said. Comparisons by the Federation were based on Bureau of Census figures.

For all except one levy—the property tax—the main types of taxes assessed by the states brought larger revenues last year than in 1937. The decline in property tax collections continued the trend toward less state dependence on this source which has prevailed since 1915. This is further indication that the realty tax, long out of proportion, is defeating its purpose.

Taxes on gasoline and other motor fuels brought the states the largest amount of revenue in 1939, totaling $800,881,000. Next in line of the big contributors was the payroll tax, which amounted to $798,993,000 in the forty-eight states. The proportion of total tax collections in 1939 represented by these two taxes was nearly the same—20.9 percent from motor fuels, and 20.8 percent from payroll levies. In 1937, motor fuel taxes had brought in twenty percent and the payroll tax, at the time effective in only thirty-six states, 9.2 percent of total collections. Two other taxes—income and liquor—made appreciably larger contributions to state revenues in 1939 than in 1937.

All of this is a reminder that the crushing machine must be halted and its weight lightened. The sooner it is done the better for the general welfare.

Weir

JOHN HAMILTON and the Republican National Committee, by the selection of Ernest T. Weir, steel magnate, to handle the committee's financial affairs, have served further notice that they intend to go after the New Deal head-on in the coming campaign.

There are thousands of potential Republican candidates throughout the country who talk timidly about meeting the New Deal half-way. This is a hang-over from previous campaigns in which, dazzled by New Deal vote-getting powers, many Republican office-seekers did much "co-operating" with the New Deal and promptly put themselves at a disadvantage election day.

By 1938 many Republican candidates braced up and showed real fight, some of them—notably Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania—scoring notable success by so doing.

Apparently Hamilton and his advisors will continue on this line. Weir has had no compromise with the New Deal. He early went after NRA. He bucked up to the National Labor Relations crowd. When Roosevelt jumped the "economic royalists" Weir came right back by saying he was born a commoner, is now a commoner and will continue to be a commoner.

Weir started as an office boy at $3 a week. At 30 he bought a tumble-down old steel plant and built it up. He became head of the National Steel Company in 1929. That company has shown a profit every year of the depression. He is one of all-too-few men in the country who possess real intestinal fortitude—a sadly needed quality often expressed in a short but realistic though somewhat inelegant word.

Lumber States Betrayed

CANADIAN LUMBER INTERESTS in British Columbia can lay down Douglas fir in New York cheaper than it can be produced and transported from the states of our own Northwest.

In part, the difference is due to the thirteen per cent depreciation in the Canadian dollar. In part, it has been caused by the sharp increase in American costs of production that have resulted from the various New Deal regulations on wages and hours, social security and old age payments. But these factors by themselves would not have brought this situation about were it not for the fifty per cent reduction in duty on Canadian lumber products contained in the 1936 trade agreement, and the elimination of the quota on Canadian lumber imports which featured the 1938 trade treaty.

Before the New Deal talks any more about helping American workers and American business, it would do well to look into the effects of the Canadian trade agreements on our lumber producing states.

If it was a breach of international law, of which there isn't any more, for the British naval men to take their countrymen off the German prison ship what would you have thought of them if they had let the opportunity slide?

The enthusiastic victory claims of Europe's warring powers sound amateurish compared to those glowing stories coming out of the baseball training camps.

This World war is costing the Allies twice as much per day as did the first one. Let's hope it makes the ensuing peace, twice as reasonable, too.

One of the nicest things about being a small boy, we remember, is that there are only three seasons—baseball, football and basketball.

The Light in the Window

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Blessed, twice blessed, more blessed than words can express, is the man who comes happily to his home. . . . Comes down the road from his work, and feels a fair lift of his spirits, of his whole being, as he comes in sight of his home. . . .

Sees a light in a window and knows that in that light, waiting for him, are children, is a woman who loves him and who will be glad to see his face.

Sees a door open and sees a golden light spread for him upon the ground. Steps on that tapestry of light, walks across that threshold, shuts the door behind him, and shuts out all the bedeviling outer world for a little while. . . . And is at peace with himself and those who love him.

There are men who possess riches. There are men who have great power and who inspire fear in all their fellows. There are men who work alone and live alone and achieve many ambitions in the mart of the world. Men whose names are often on men's lips and whose attainments make a little ripple on the wide surface of time. But their lives are incomplete and they are not wholly successful because nowhere on the earth is a light shining for them and nowhere are they living in the hearts of those that know them best.

It is no small thing for a man to win this love. It is no small failure when a man has this treasure in his hands and tosses it foolishly away.

Jitterbugs Have Stiff Competition

By EDWIN C. HILL

There might be a bit of problem in this juncture of the census year and the swing mania. Getting a jitterbug to stand still long enough to be counted might put the census-taker on the spot. Maybe they'll just have to take a gallop poll, so to speak.

I had an idea that the jitterbugs were piping down—the name already seems rather quaint—but they tell me they're hopped up wilder than ever, and there is stiff competition for the title of "swing king," as if this being election year weren't excitement enough for a single fleeting twelve-month.

Several magazines which clock the swing circuit gave the accolade to young Glenn Miller, taking critical account of an important instrument in his hand—his cash register, which is ringing up $20,000 a week since the start of his New York engagement several days ago.

Started As Cow Milker

That isn't hay, as the Miller boy knew well when he was milking cows in his native Clarinda, Ia., for $8 a month and keep, which was the start of his musical career. A bang-up milker going to work on a fresh clover-fed cow can work up a nice "Barn Yard Blues" if he has a good sense of rhythm and knows how to get the proper tempo and resonance out of the beat of the stream on the upper inside of the pail. If there's a bell on the cow, providing an occasional obligato as she nuzzles alfalfa in her stanchion, and if she is a co-operative cow and will come in once in a while with a lowing saxophone effect, everything is perfect.

It is significant that all of our major and minor swing kings got going before the full ascendancy of the electric milking machine. Anyway, it was this bucolic symphony which formed Glenn Miller's swing genius, as the boy got rhythm milking twenty cows night and morning, and here he is a big town lad with plectated pants, shoveling greenbacks instead of alfalfa.

Harder At Music

Just to throw a switch on the juvenile back-to-the-farm rush which such news might start, we report hastily that young Glenn Miller worked harder at his music than he ever did at his milking or hay-shoveling. In the University of Colorado, at Boulder, music was his sideline, but he withdrew, before the completion of his course, to make music his life work. It wasn't long before he was playing in the bands of such swing luminaries as Benny Pollack, Benny Goodman and Gene Krupa.

He was for several years a free lance trombonist and arranger for Dorsey, Red Nichols, Casa Loma, Ray Noble and others. It seems that he was away ahead of the parade. Much of his music was rejected because it was "too revolutionary." Three years ago, he formed his own band. His first two bands failed to click, but this one came through. The parade has caught up with him.

He is a tall, earnest, scholarly, bespectacled young man who says his success was due to his persistence in "refining and tempering" his music to the precision requirements of modern swing. In short, he worked hard to become a sound musician, and it was a lot more arduous than milking cows. Incidentally, the "juke" box helped a lot. This is the five-cents-a-shot music box at the roadside dance halls. Of the twelve to twenty-four discs in 300,000 of these music boxes, from two to six are usually Glenn Miller's.

A Sidelight

As to this dance excitement, I happened to get a little sidelight on its big-town drift from a friend the other day, a widely known woman novelist. She is middle-aged, lives alone in a beautiful Upper East Side apartment, has a lot of time on her hands and is concerned about her figure and in keeping fit. So what does she do but get a limber young jitterbug—from Brooklyn, incidentally, where they all grow double-pointed—to come in every afternoon from two to four, to put

QUITS POLITICS

Senator Vic Donahey

Decision of Senator Vic Donahey to retire from official life at end of present term, is construed in Washington as a blow to Democratic chances in Ohio, in the November elections. Donahey is regarded as an almost magic vote-getter in the Buckeye State and his absence from the ticket will be sorely missed.

Third Term Issue Is Not Personal But a Broad and Serious Question

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, March 6.—The third term is an issue. As it pertains directly to President Roosevelt, everybody recognizes it as an issue. About that phase of it, there is abundant talk.

But there is another phase of it. The third term is an issue in a broader sense—an impersonal sense. It is an issue the same as the tariff is an issue, or the spending policy, or what not. The principle of a third term is an issue. It is an issue as an abstraction, regardless of its concrete relation to Mr. Roosevelt. The question, "Is a third term right, now or at any time," is inescapably before the country.

As an issue in this broad sense, men in public life are under pressure to take a stand on it. Many of them are obliged to take a stand. For Republicans, this is no great embarrassment. But Democrats—gosh, how they dread it.

A Third on the Spot
Some of them—the Democratic senators who are secure in their seats for two or four years more—can face it, even though reluctantly. But consider a Democrat who is up for re-election and re-election this year. That means roughly a third of the Democratic senators. It means every one of the Democrats in the House (except the very few, if any, who retire voluntarily). It means other Democratic leaders, not now in office but seek it—Democratic candidates for every office, Senate, House, governor, hundreds of minor posts.

Consider one of these. The issue is put up to him: "The third term—do you for it or against it?" The unhappy candidate, sighing desperately, picks one of the alternatives. With a manner of "Heaven help me," he announces, let us say, he is for it.

Refusal Implications
Now look forward to the Democratic national convention in July. Suppose Mr. Roosevelt, at that time, says he doesn't want a third term, that he won't have it. The mere fact of Mr. Roosevelt's renouncing a third term would strengthen the tradition against it, would put a kind of smirch on the very idea of a third term. This would happen if Mr. Roosevelt said no more than: "I do not want a third term."

But Mr. Roosevelt might say more, or imply more. The mere act of renunciation by him would have the effect of saying more. Mr. Roosevelt might say in words or by the manner of his action imply like: "I conform to the usage of a hundred and fifty years; I uphold the venerable American tradition."

If that happened, at once the Democratic party would make a virtue of the renunciation. They would go into the campaign as a party that had solemnly rejected a third term—rejected it at a time when they might have embraced it, and been successful in embracing it; when they might have elected Mr. Roosevelt, had they been willing to break the tradition.

Would Turn on Them
In such a mood, swearing fidelity to the tradition as no party ever had before, and proving their faith by their works, the Democrats would tend to turn upon those Democrats who, preceding the convention, had endorsed the third term. Such Federal debt can be reduced only in two ways: (1) By outright repudiation, which means simply cancelling the debt; or (2) inflation, which has the same effect in a round-about way. . . . Taxes can be increased easier than spending can be reduced. However, if taxes are pushed much higher I fear a national sit-down strike of taxpayers.

Johnson Booms Senator McNary

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, March 6.—The publican's lot is not a happy one. They could win in the coming election, but they can't do it with nothing and, as has so often been said, they can't beat somebody with nobody. Their job is to recapture some of the great groups the New Deal took away from them. The biggest of these is the farm population of the midwestern states, especially Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. That is not as it seems, both Ohio and are distinctly doubtful now make a Republican victory in those States they must have things—a definite farm man and a candidate who can win the farmers that they really want.

A winning farm program is a relatively easy—a direct and simple—on domestic consumption, aided by a processing tax and a minimum of regulation.

Is a Sales Tax
Yes, a processing tax is a tax. So in greater or less degree is other tax. The bulk of the revenue is from sales taxes, or hidden.

Yes, consumers will know what difference does it make whether they pay a price for farm products or not. Mr. Wallace's destruction of artificially created shortages, reduction, gigantic stored surplus, lost export markets, or the same price part in cost of the tax? I have written this several times and shall write it several times more, because it is right and important and has yet been accepted.

After trying and failing in every other farm scheme known to man, the Fourth New Deal man are probably aware that is the only practical approach to the farm problem, but won't take it openly, not only because it did not devise it but have used it in favor of others which used greater political regime and control.

It therefore remains available a winning Republican was the corn, wheat and bible to those great open spaces has fooled so often by Republican uses of "equality for agriculture" that the G.O.P. would need a convincing to be sure of them.

A Ready-Made Candidate

Although it isn't his business to be nominating Republican candidates, I have the crown to several in Bruce Barton, Fiorello La Guardia and Wendell Willkie—who are a Democrat—so maybe risk nominating another.

For this particular strategy Republicans have a ready-made candidate in Senator Charles McNary. For twelve years he has been fighting for the McNary farm bill, which would have for wheat at least at the proposed it—even though it didn't work now. It didn't work that night made the election. Roosevelt possible, made the country conscious of the farm and the farmers conscious of McNary.

A Veteran

He wouldn't need any special agriculture. They would know whatever he proposed he would fight with bulldog tenacity, he is a veteran publican, a charming personality, a good speaker. He is as present a candidate with other great any of the rest of the best think they hear the call, he has the advantage discussed which none of them has.

Senator Taft stuck his nose on this problem and so far as his lack of familiarity with even so halting a talker as Wallace could and did not look like an amateur. McNary would have as much trouble convincing midwestern farmers as Smith did. From this angle at least, Senator McNary is a natural.—Distributed by Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Britain and France, boasting air equipment, have not yet a single move in the direction of the Krupp factories, the of which could severely cripple German military preparations. It is understandable why planes have confined their over Britain to scouting their cause it is a long way from England and a much longer back and Germany admits a stage of fighting planes that necessary range to protect bombers. But the Krupp work not nearly so far from the air bases, in fact it would be short hop over the lines again.

Not that we want the war any worse than it is. We hope comes even tamer. Right now, it looks like both sides are sent to prepare for a long but hope that there won't be. And with the latter mind, they're not doing anything to hurt the chances of some ing device.

A Peculiar War

From the Fairmont, W. Va., Times

Gen. Hugh Johnson puts a pertinent question when he asks why the British and French haven't sent their bombing planes over Germany to wreck the great Krupp munitions works. Failure to do so has led the vitrolle war-dog to suggest that the European war looks like a "phony" to him.

It must be admitted that it is a most peculiar situation. The alleged battle has been going on for nearly six months now and still little has happened except on the high seas, where all the action seems to be centered.

What makes it so peculiar is that "I don't have to tell you what I want, Ken," the boss of the Telegraph city room declared with confidence. "This flood down in the Ohio Valley was just made to order for you. Go to it, lad, and don't spare the horses!"

"Meaning just what—providing you don't mind going on record," McNally parried while his mind raced ahead to the possibilities of the job. "You said much the same thing when I covered the Hindenburg disaster, and what did I do, poor trusting fool—that I am? I got stuck for a hotel bill when I stopped over in New York on the way back to line of business, and several unauthorized dinners."

The fair-haired boy of the Telegraph staff smiled unctuously at his boss. "It took an act of God, but I got rid of this little pest cousin of yours who wants to break into the business," he said with some malice, jerking his thumb over into the corner occupied by a remarkably attractive young girl. "Me—nursemaid to an embryo sob sister!"

"I must have neglected to mention, Ken," the editor resumed with a smile meant to be engaging. "We want a slick story on the woman's angle of this disaster, too. Kitty's still home having a baby... so the understudy goes with you. Good luck, old boy, and don't forget to take good care of your protegee!"

Ken's face froze.

"Listen, honey child, haven't you ever been in a boat before?" Ken demanded sarcastically, pulling his life belt into a more snug position. "Sit down or Lucius here will spend all day getting us down valley. This

"This flood has created a lot of odd situations," the Salvation Army captain was saying to old Lucius. "It takes something like this to bring out the real selfishness of men. That McNally man over there, for instance, checking supplies with us. He and his girl partner allowed themselves to be stranded in the path of the flood, just so a family could be removed from danger in their boat. They got a license at city hall first thing when we brought them in this morning. Called by radio, they did!"

"A license for what—prize fighting? They was arguing like cats and dogs when I brung 'em down valley," Lucius commented dryly, looking over to where Ken was tabulating the relief supplies. Letitia, a borrowed pair of dungarees pinned up to her slim waist, counted them off to him. "I'd a bet they'd drown each other before a rescue boat picked 'em up, but that's their business."

The army man looked suspicious. "You say you brought them down valley? Why didn't you bring them back after you'd brought the marooned people in?"

Old Lucius shrugged eloquently and grinned wisely. "I had enough of their arguin' on the way down," he confessed, "an' besides, they each slipped me 10 bucks on the sly 'fore we started... not to bring 'em back!"

Keeping Clean Beauty "Must"

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT MIGHT be well for the girls who ply powder pads that are in need of washing to know that they are sowing the seeds of blackheads. Why scrub the pretty face, then use soiled wool to put on the dull finish? Doesn't make sense.

Worse still is to use the pad on a skin surface that isn't clean. Sad to relate, the human face is always picking up atmospheric dust which, when combined with the exudations of the sebaceous glands, forms a horrid film that only soap and water will remove. The wise woman never puts on make-up unless she can paint on a clean canvas. If she uses a foundation cosmetic, the powder should stick like a friend and a brother.

Before dinner use a cleansing oil; it is more easily removed than a semi-solid cream. Clear it away with cleansing tissues. Fluff on powder lightly, touch the cheeks with the rouge pad, use a little more powder. That trick tones down the synthetic blush, gives a natural effect that imparts freshness to the complexion.

Keep your beauty aids in a box so they will be free of dust. Letting them kick around in a drawer is an untidy habit. Wash combs and brushes frequently. One can't be too fastidious.

After growth has been attained, nothing much can be done about bowed legs. The bones have changed in character. In infancy this trouble can be corrected by prescription shoes and other means.

Knock knee is more prevalent among girls than boys, and the reason, so doctors say, is that boys have more outdoor exercise, are more inclined to eat proper food. Because of greater activity, boys correct any defect in childhood in the bony framework of the body by natural means. So, Mrs. Mama, if your girl

Double Judging Will Mark Garden Club Contest

An incentive for beautiful gardens in this city will be encouraged by a new idea of much interest to garden lovers of this city in the judging of spring gardens by members of the Garden group of the Woman's Civic Club.

Heretofore gardens in Cumberland have been judged in the summer, but now they will be judged both seasons and records will be kept for the final judging to take place August 1.

A ten-dollar prize will be awarded the first winner in the senior garden group and a five-dollar prize in the junior group. Everybody interested is invited to enter the contest, for which there will be no entrance fee. Those who enter the spring contest are asked to communicate with Mrs. Albert A. Doub, Sr., 403 Washington street.

This contest is an annual event of the Garden club of the Woman's Civic Club.

Don't Glare over That Identical Dress

If you meet a woman on the street, at a concert or dance, wearing the same model dress as yours, it is not good manners to glare at her. She probably is just as "chagrined" as you — although neither of you should be embarrassed — just smile at each other in friendly understanding fashion, and think no more of the matter, particularly if she looks as nice, or even nicer, than you do wearing it.

Decline with Thanks

Doctor Declares There Isn't any Ideal Figure

WPA Taking Measure- ments for Standardiz- ing Women's Dresses

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What are the measurements for the ideal female figure about which so much is written in the magazines lately?

There is no ideal female figure and no measurements. The measurements taken by the WPA are for the purpose of standardizing measurements for dresses and should not be taken as a concept of perfection. Figures differ with body types. A false standard of the female figure is set up in fashion plates. Tall, languid, feeble figures, very much too long in the leg and all apparently in the early stages of galloping consumption, tend to mislead, to hurt, young women who would rather be dead than not in the fashion.

Proper Diet

What is a diet for chronic colitis?

Chronic colitis of the non-infectious type would better be called "irritable colon." Low carbohydrate alone, however, is not the only or most important part of the treatment.

Bowel-conscious patients require frequent assurance that a daily evacuation is not essential or even normal under certain circumstances of diet, and that cathartics are never necessary. In patients who have been whipping the bowel with cathartics, a period of apparent constipation will naturally follow their withdrawal. After giving up a long habit of cathartics, if the bowel has not evacuated by the fourth day, an oil retention enema can be given.

Fear of Poisoning

The fallacy of auto-intoxication must be explained away and the fear of poisoning from excessive meat intake be allayed. "Constipation headache" should be explained on a reflex basis rather than as being due to poisoning.

LENTEN REDUCING DIET FOR THURSDAY

Breakfast: Applesauce with cream; one egg, one slice toast with butter; coffee and warm skimmed milk (half and half) with one lump of sugar.

Lunch: Baked beans, three tablespoonsful; one slice bread or toast with butter; glass of milk, celery, olives, black coffee or tea with lemon.

Dinner: Cottage cheese omelette (two eggs, three ounces cottage cheese, one tablespoonful cream, salt to taste; bake or fry in one-half tablespoonful of fat); one slice bread with butter; dish of stewed tomatoes, almonds and 10 raisins; coffee with warm skimmed milk, half and half, with one lump of sugar.

Day's Calories—1000.

The low carbohydrate diet for functional bowel disorders is: Food to be avoided entirely: Cereals; high starch vegetables, such as potato, cauliflower, corn; raw vegetables; no raw fruits except bananas and orange juice; miscellaneous—candy, sugar, syrup, honey, milk, chocolate.

Foods that may be eaten freely: Cream soups, bouillon, consommé; vegetables (cooked and sieved) preferred: carrots, spinach, peas, asparagus, beets, tomatoes, string beans, mushrooms, squash; fish, meat and cheese, all varieties—cottage cheese especially beneficial; eggs in any form; drinks—coffee, tea, cream, buttermilk, and certain prepared beverages; desserts—gelatin with whipped cream, cooked fruit, sherbet; miscellaneous—peanut butter, mayonnaise, olive oil, salad oil, cod-liver oil.

Rhode Island, the smallest state, has the longest official name—"The State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations."

There are more than 11,000 lakes in Minnesota.

Favor Burden Soon Lifted

Winchester, Ky., (P)—Parker Gardner gave a friend a short ride in his automobile.

"Thanks," said the friend, alighting from the car. "I'll give you a lift some day."

Five minutes later, Gardner was back.

"I want that lift now," he told his debtor. "I need someone to lift my car so I can get out of the ice at the curb."

He got the "lift."

Dewey and Taft Speeches Will Be Heard by Radio

Current Issues Will Be Discussed by Candidates

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, March 5.—Two aspirants for the Republican presidential nomination are on the advance schedule for broadcasting on Wednesday night.

From the time standpoint, Thos. E. Dewey is to be heard first. He is listed for WJZ-NBC at 9:30, the broadcast to come from the University of Nebraska coliseum at Lincoln.

From Washington
Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, is the other speaker, his talk coming from Washington to be carried at 10:15 by WABC-CBS. His subject, "Government by Law and Government by Business."

"Who Pays the Sales Tax" will be the theme of the Twentieth Century fund series, Next Step Forward, via WEAP-NBC at 11:15. Dr. Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar, is the speaker.

The Indianapolis symphony weekly concert on WABC-CBS at 10:30 is to contain the music of Tchaikowsky, noted Russian composer.

The Theater of Stars of CBS at 9 is to present Gladys George in "Third Degree" in the dramatic half of the hour's broadcast.

Appears Tomorrow

Although Gene Autry had been reported as guest for Al Pearce and his Gang on WABC-CBS at 8 for last week, actually he does not appear until tomorrow.

The MBS network will turn its microphone on the final matches in the Eastern Golden Gloves matches from 11 to 12:30 at night, while WEAP-only will describe a half-hour of the activity at 11:30.

Europe list: NBC 8 a. m.; CBS 8 a. m., 6:30, 8:55, 11 p. m.; MBS-chain 9.

Congress designated Chillicothe as the capital of Ohio and the legislature met there in November, 1800.

Miller Seeks To Amend Hatch Act; Would Ruin Party, Latter Says

Washington, Mar. 5 (P)—Senator Miller (D-Ark.) has proposed repeal of a major provision of the Hatch anti-politics law, and Senator Hatch (D-NM) asserted such action "would mean the absolute defeat of the Democratic party in 1940."

At present the act outlaws political activity by federal employees. Miller told reporters that his amendment would make it possible for these workers to engage in "voluntary" political activity, but would retain features of the original Hatch act, forbidding the use of coercion, intimidation or influence upon employees.

"Unless my amendment is adopted," Miller asserted, "the Hatch act will ruin the Democratic party."

Hatch took a different view, saying that Miller's amendment went to the heart of the law and "would lose many thousands more votes than could be gained by the employees."

Senator Minton (D-Ind.) said he would support Miller's proposal.

Tomorrow, the Senate will consider amendments by Hatch to broaden the present law by applying its prohibitions to state employees paid with federal funds.

Proposals Made In the Home Are More Durable

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The latest find of the Institute of Family Relations, after having completed a study of romance and engagements, is to the effect that more proposals of marriage are made in automobiles than in the home. But proposals made in the home are more durable, lead more unfailingly to marriage, and are therefore the best bet. Lack of privacy in the home is given as the reason why George defers popping the question. Apartments are small, these days, and be it house or flat, both seem to be infested with family interruptions.

Father may just have thought of a daring plan to stop the war in Europe, and is desperately in need of ears into which to pour the glad word. His arrival may coincide with the moment the shy young man has mustered up enough courage to slip his arm around daughter's waist. George leaps to examine a vase upon the mantelpiece and while listening to father's plan his courage evaporates.

Is Streamlined
Today love is streamlined. The modern young man need not run the family gamut at all. He may arrive at the girl's front door and by honking the horn even omit weather-pleasantries with the family. The

IS IT THE LOWEST

EVEN IF your partner's card on your opening lead is an eight or nine spot, you should not necessarily read it as encouraging, suggesting that you repeat the suit. The paramount question is whether or not you read it as the lowest he holds. If you decide that he probably has a lower card or cards, then you can reckon that he played a higher-than-necessary card seeking another lead of the suit. But, no matter how high it is, if you figure him to hold no lower ones, then you may treat it as discouraging, suggesting that you shift suits.

In the West during this deal sat a young player of promise who had not been at the game very long. She had just about arrived at the stage in her instruction at which she knew the conventional leads and had been taught the main fundamentals about teamwork between partners. Among these was that a high card from your partner indicated a desire for repeat of the suit led and a low one betokened a shift.

She properly led her heart K to take the opening trick. When she saw East's 7, a fairly high card, she repeated, laying down the A, which declarer ruffed. The declarer promptly dropped the trumps, discarded a club on the set-up heart Q, and conceded a diamond trick, ruffing her other diamond and so making an overtrick. West learned her important lesson cheaply, at the mere cost of an overtrick, not of a game. Since the 7 was the lowest heart out of sight, after declarer played the 3, it was a discouraging card and West should have shifted. Had she realized that, she would have shifted to a club and the heart Q never would have been set up for the declarer.

The Man Who Frequently Asks To Be Jailed

Carlsbad, N. M. (AP) — Deputy Sheriff Bill High has a game he plays with a Carlsbad negro named Jimmie, who has a weakness for strong drink.

"Hello, Mistah High," says a voice on the telephone to Bill. "This is Jimmie and I's drunk again. Will you come get me and put me to jail?"

"Sure will, Jimmie," says Deputy Bill. "Be right over. Where are you?"

While Bill is enroute, Jimmie changes his mind. He tries to hide. But his condition makes it an easy game of fox-and-geese.

"Ready to go, Jimmie?" asks Bill when he catches up.

"Yessuh, Mistah High, yessuh. But you all sure got here in a powerful hurry."

Spring Chic Is a Matter of Accent

Polka dots punctuate this spectator sports costume. Both the green crepe turban and bag are peppered with white dots.

How You Wear Hats and Gloves Will Tell Story

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Fashion Editor

Punctuation will be one of the most important parts of your fashion composition this spring.

The things you do with hat, bag and gloves are going to make or break the smoothness of your style.

Fashion's dictators have tried no high links in design or silhouettes in a war year. (Biggest change was a lowering in waistline of some models to give a long torso.)

For the most part they have stuck to sound basic design which you already know—a slim fitted waist above a full short skirt or a bloused bodice above a slim straight skirt. It's the things done with accents that makes the fun.

Both American and Parisian designers put a lot of colorful punctuation marks in the first 1940 fashion chapter. Paris puts a tweed-covered, gold-headed cane, a ruffled glove or gold coin buttons with a tailored suit to give it a new look.

American designers have worked out hats, bags, gloves and costume jewels which have a common link in color.

There are sailors and bonnets of navy plaid taffeta with pouch bags to match to give an exclamation point of color to a navy blue suit.

There are scoop-brimmed polka dotted sailors and gloves of crepe to wear with black and gray suits. There are white-dotted turbans and pouch bags of red, green, or mist-blue crepe to punctuate spectator sports clothes.

To meet the American woman's demands for harmonious accessories assembled without great expenditure of time or money, five American designers of hats, bags, gloves and costume jewelry are making all these accessories in new spring colors. Thus exactly the same shade can be obtained in any one of them without frenzied running around.

Colors are blue mist (a grayed blue), bright scarlet red, royal blue, dusty rose and something pretty vibrant called "yippie yellow."

A lot of effective punctuation is going to be done with pockets this spring. Richard Koret's newest bags are pocket bags that swing from leather belts and can be worn either over coats or dresses. Sometimes the belt carries small twin bags—one on each side; again one big bag swings over the left hipbone. Most of these are made of plaid or checked in white.

More pockets appear in leather envelope bags equipped with four leather envelope pockets to hold keys, cosmetics and coin.

Consider Others

If you are the first one up on Sunday morning and you get the newspaper, don't scramble it so that no one can find the parts he or she wants. It is not too difficult to keep the different sections separate and in order, and it is plain good manners to consider the other fellow in this matter.

Question of When To Punish Child Baffles Parents

Should Make Clear to Child Things He Is To Avoid

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: I would like your advice on how to handle my three and one-half-year-old boy, who is occasionally defiant when told to do something or refrain from doing something..."

I answered her that, in the first place, she should consider the wide difference between the effect of punishment to keep this child from doing what she forbids him to do and punishment to make him do what you want him to do. This difference is as great as day and night, even though most parents, otherwise intelligent, don't recognize it at all.

"If you are skillful, you can, by administering physical pain, train this child to avoid doing certain specific acts he must not do, such as kicking you, playing with fire, running into street. Make clear to him the one or two things he always must avoid. Then always be on hand when he has the opportunity to do them, until he avoids them automatically and permanently.

Let Him Choose

"Don't yell at him; don't divert him; don't even hold him. Let him choose. As he is doing or about to do the forbidden act, seize him, bare his bottom and give him at once several smacks with your bare, flat hand, low on his bare, fat thighs. Make it hurt. Do likewise for every repetition of the act; there must not be a single exception.

As soon as this child will stay where he is put without being held or tied, you can abandon spanking. Then, as effective punishment, assign him to sit in a chair doing nothing, where you can see him, for exactly fifteen minutes (always a definite time).

Remember, you must center your efforts on just a few forbidden acts, merely intercepting for the time in all others, until he learns to avoid these acts. And say NO just once as you do so. NO will deter him in new situations you had not foreseen.

"But you won't spank or use any other kind of punishment to get this child to do what you want him to do. Except in routines, you won't command him. You won't tell him to do this or that. Instead, you will ask him and try to induce him to accede to your request. If he doesn't, you will have no reason to punish him or to feel vexed. You made a request; you asked him to make a choice. He made it, taking you at your word. Since you did not command him, his failure to accede was not disobedience. Then why should you punish him?"

If he does not accede this time, hope that he will the next. Warmly approve him when he does.

And when this child, having learned the meaning of NO is ten or eighteen, go on requesting him to do the things you wish him to do, honoring his choices. Then you will have a child who will co-operate and to whom stubbornness will be practically a stranger. It worked with my own children and it has worked with scores of other children I have carefully observed. I can think of no other investment in child guidance which brings so rich dividends."

Former Russian Opera Prima Donna
Content To Sing in Small Churches

Ex-Countess Devotes Life to Missionary Work,
Spurning Wealth Her Voice Might Bring Her

By RAY F. FRAZER
Central Press Correspondent

Hermosa Beach, Cal., Feb. 29.—Passersby in southern California branch towns often stop enthralled to hear a rich contralto voice, which needs no public address system, boom out from some tiny church or mission chapel. It is a dramatic voice, certain of each note it places. It is the kind of a voice that people pay $5 and $10 a seat to hear—the kind that makes its owner wealthy—but the free-will offerings of these churches usually average 10 cents a person.

The owner of that voice is "Dame" Maria Karinska, once prima donna of the Imperial Russian opera and, after a riding accident which stopped her dancing, an internationally-known concert singer.

Mme. Karinska, now in her early fifties, lives alone in a cheap little waterfront apartment, devoid of anything resembling the glamor that once was hers and subsisting largely on her faith that the "Lord will provide"—frequently to the distress of her landlady.

This is not a case of Fate forgetting her golden voice. On the contrary, she deliberately chose to be a free-lance "singing evangelist."

Daughter of Cossacks

As the first-born child of a middle-class Cossack officer of the czar's guard, she was raised in the Ural mountains like a boy. At an early age she was taught to ride a horse like a Cossack, including the bareback feats they performed.

Later she married a Polish count and lived in the oil fields of the Caucasus, where her husband was a mining engineer. The count was killed fighting in the Russo-Japanese war. Mme. Karinska's second marriage was to an Englishman whom she rescued after he had been left for dead on the dueling grounds of a Petrograd park.

While singing in an orthodox religious festival in St. Petersburg she was overheard by the czar who commended a personal appearance. This led to a score of palace appointments, so that she became well acquainted with the imperial family and its entourage, including the notorious monk Rasputin.

Meanwhile she was studying music under such masters as her cousin, Feodor Chaliapin, and Enrico Caruso. She sang, all told, in twenty-six countries and before many a royal personage. Twice she was crowned "Queen of Song" in Russia.

Once Wealthy
When the World war began she was owner of a palace in Petrograd, containing a large museum and requiring many servants. Her jewels included many handsome pins, brooches, necklaces studded with rubies, emeralds and diamonds.

At the suggestion of the czar, Mme. Karinska bought a private railway coach specially constructed so that a portion of one side would fold down into a stage on which she appeared with her accompanists. Thus she toured the borders of Russia, going into the Balkans and what is now Finland to sing to the soldiers and raise funds for their hospitalization.

Mme. Karinska is credited with raising more than $2,000,000 in this way. At the end of two years of this work she was given the rare distinction of being presented with the medal of the International Red Cross under the crown, including a life membership.

Her war experience came near costing Mme. Karinska her life. She was hit by a piece of shrapnel just above where the heart should be, but it so happened that a childhood accident had pushed her heart a lit-

Maria Karinska, once prima donna of the Imperial Russian opera

Retains Many Medals

Dame Marie still has many of the medals honoring her talents. These included the order of St. Stanislaw, the Nicholas II medal, the Alexander II medal, the Romanoff 300th anniversary medal. At one time her wardrobe included 400 costumes. She has a few now, but usually appears at churches in the blue robe of the missionary graduates from Hermon college in London.

Mme. Karinska's palace and its contents were confiscated during the revolution and she was lucky to escape through Siberia to China with her children by hiding in a coffin, draped with a Red Cross flag.

In Shanghai she resumed her career as a concert singer and raised huge sums for the White Russians. This attracted attention in America and she was offered a $48,000 contract for her initial American appearances.

Converted in 1924

"While en route from Shanghai to America on the S. S. Empress of Australia in 1924," said Mme. Karinska, "I met a missionary traveling third class and was converted. So I tore up the contract and have been living by faith ever since."

Mme. Karinska, records show, started her missionary appearances in Canada immediately, though she could speak no English. Then she went to London and in one year completed the three-year missionary training course in Mt. Hermon college, paying her way by singing.

She then came to the Los Angeles zone, but could not stay under quota rulings and went to western Canada where she did missionary work for eight years. Recently she was able to reenter the United States as a Canadian citizen.

Although there is quite a large colony of Russian exiles in southern California, including former friends, Mme. Karinska is not fraternizing much with them, for the reason that to them she is now an unorthodox non-conformist.

At present, she says her chief desire is to find a way to get her son and daughter and her grandchildren to this country. That is a problem, for the son and daughter are white Russians and the grandchildren are natives of China. "I think," says Mme. Karinska, "that the United States made a serious mistake when it recognized the present government of Russia."

In her concerts Mme. Karinska sings many Russian folk songs, including a number that she composed herself.

For years it has been an axiom with the Cumberland Cloak and Suit Store that day in and day out ample assortments must be carried. Especially so when special sales events are announced. Monday, March 4, was one of the rare occasions when we under-estimated our supply. When we advertised in the Sunday Times, Sunday, March 3, 81x99 PEPPERELL SHEETS at 3 for $2.00 we sincerely believed that 35 dozen sheets would meet the demand. We never dreamed that this supply would be completely exhausted by 10:15 Monday morning. To the many customers who shopped for this fine bargain Monday and were disappointed we express our sincere apology.

From the PRESS BOX Anyway, Grissom Is In Big Leagues Now

By JOHN LARDNER

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (N. A. N. A.) — The first thing the New York Yankees said to Lee Grissom, their new southpaw pitcher, was, "Welcome to the big leagues!"

"Thank you, boys," said Mr. Grissom quietly. "I have paid my debt to society and am glad to be amongst you."

Mr. Grissom came to the Yankees from the Cincinnati Reds of the National League, carrying his reputation in his inside coat pocket. He was sprung for good behavior by Warden Will McKechnie, who obtained Joe Beggs in exchange. Beggs was convicted of being no particular use to the Yankees, and was sentenced to serve a short stretch — "one to give," as they say in criminal circles — with the National League.

Mr. Grissom seems to be in good shape, aside from his prison pallor and a slightly handgrip look, common among National Leaguers. He says his arm is loose as a goose. He shows no sign of the leg injury which he suffered a year and a half ago, while attempting to steal a base in a desperate effort to escape from the Ford C. Frick Memorial Penitentiary.

May Be Washed Up

Now, Grissom may not be much good to the Yanks. The dice are loaded against any pitcher who has had trouble with his business arm, and the Yanks are fast company. Grissom — "Old Pimple-Head," as the Yankees call him in their affectionate way — may be all washed up.

But Manager Joe McCarthy appears to have faith in Lefty. The story of how Mr. McCarthy rescued Mr. Grissom from a life sentence at hard labor in the National League is one of the great prison stories of all time — moving, stirring, full of rich pathos, like the story of Jean Valjean. It brings a tear to your correspondent's eye (the one that was shot out in the Boer War).

Grissom made six or eight daring attempts to escape from the National League. At one time, with infinite patience, he made a rope ladder out of the bristles in his shaving brush. But when it was finished, the club was in St. Louis, and a rope ladder is no good in St. Louis. Another time, Lefty attempted to chisel his way out of the clubhouse in Brooklyn with a rough tool constructed from his spoon (they don't allow knives to inmates of the National League, for obvious reasons). But when he got out, a Brooklyn scout tried to claim him, and Lefty hurried back to the cell blocks.

Finally, the Yankees paid a visit to Cincinnati, as they do every year to one town in the National League. Manager McCarthy was shocked by the conditions he saw.

"Tch, tch!" he muttered, contemplating Grissom. "I wonder what that poor wretch is in for. He has an honest face, what a he is of it."

McKechnie Not A Bad Man

The Yanks had a world series to play in Cincinnati. Oppressed by the terrible conditions around them, they made it as short as possible. This was tough on Grissom. Would Lefty get his chance to make himself known to this party from the world outside the National League? Yes, friends, he got it. At bottom, Warden Will McKechnie is not a bad man. Half a century of life in the National League has not soured his true nature.

He tossed Lefty in there after a few months later to send Joe Beggs up the river to the National League (and Beggs's mother thought he would grow up to be president. Ah, the irony of it!) McCarthy wrote to Warden McKechnie.

"You have in the National League," he said, "a certain Grissom, who is more sinned against than sinning. No doubt, Spring him. Warden, I urge you. Turn him loose. Give him to me, and I will endeavor to regenerate him. Something may yet be made of this unhappy spalpeen."

The Warden thought it over. Summoning Grissom, he cut his fetters and gave him a shove toward the door.

"Beat it, Grissom. I ain't looking," he said.

"Thanks, Warden," said Lefty, and was gone.

This spring, among his new playmates, Grissom is quiet. But not too quiet. Something of the old spirit is there, unbroken by prison life.

"Now that I'm in the big league where nobody kicks you around," he says, "I'll murder 'em. I'll knock 'em dead."

The Yankees think there may be hope for him.

Maryland Spring
Sports Program
Starts March 23 On Fastest Track

University's Baseball Team To Open against
North Carolina

College Park, Md., March 5 (AP) — The University of Maryland's 54-event spring sports program will get underway March 23, with the baseball and lacrosse teams first in action.

The baseball team will open against North Carolina at Chapel Hill, while the lacrosse team meets Mount Washington. The track and tennis teams will not see action until the first week in April.

Ambitious schedules have been arranged for all of the teams. Twenty-five games, 15 of them at home, are listed by the baseball team. The tennis team has 12 matches, nine at home. The track squad will be host in four of its five dual meets and the lacrosse team will travel for half of its ten battles.

Lacrosse Outlook Bright

Although prospects are bright, the teams will have to hit a high mark to equal last spring's record of 34 victories, one tie and nine losses. The outlook for lacrosse probably is brighter than in the other sports. There are seven regulars and a number of capable holdovers back from the 1939 squad that won the collegiate title.

Forming the nucleus of the team will be Jack Grier, goalie; Leo Mueller and Jack Mueller, points; Milton Mullitz, All-American first defense; Bill Cole, center, and Him Jeil. Bill Bond, Jordan Sexton and Oscar Nevares, attack.

A difficult infield problem confronts the baseball team, with only Second Baseman Adama Bengoechea returning from the 1939 squad. Dick McHale, Bill England and Newton Cox are the leading candidates for the other three positions.

Veterans Earl Spring and Pershing Mondorff, with Leon Vannals and Max Hunt, up from the freshmen, are a capable pitching quartet. Bob Burns and Meale DuVal will do the catching.

In the outfield there are Hugh Keller, leading hitter last spring, Fritz Maisel and Burton Culver.

Plenty of Runners

There will be runners aplenty on the track team, but the field section is not so strong. The runners are Joe Murphy and Kenneth Barnes, sprinters; Alan Miller, Gene Ochsenreiter, Whitey Condon, half-milers; Mason Chronister, miler, and Tommy Fields, two-miler.

The Terps have no hurdlers and pole vaulters, but have Murphy and Barnes in the broad jump; Gordon Kluge in the javelin and high jump; Francis Morris and Bob Porter in the high jump; Dick Shaffer, discus, and Charlie Morris, shot put.

Al Ritzenberg and Nata Askin, Southern Conference and Middle Atlantic doubles champions, will bolster the tennis team, aided by Jack Phillips, Phil Burkum, Jim Hardy, Jim Burnside and Charlson Mehl, veterans of last year, and Doyle Burger and Harry Baugher, sophomores.

Trozso A. C. League

The Errors, with Graham and Moore setting the pace with scores of 485 and 448, scored the only sweep win in this week's Trozso A. C. League matches on the Savoy paths. In the other contests the Walks downed the Outs and the Hits bowed to the Balks. Sam DeLuca of the Outs crowded 509 steps of the lanes in registering the weekly high set score. The summaries:

Fordham's Track
Coach Not "Sold"

Fordham's Mentor Scores
Claim Dartmouth
Boards Best

New York, March 5 (AP) — It is the proud boast of Harry Hillman that the Dartmouth board track is the fastest indoor running surface to be found. In evidence, the Indians' coach points to world records that have been set on it by Glenn Cunningham in the mile, John Borican in the half-mile and 800 meters, and Fordham in the mile relay.

Oddly enough it is Bob Giebegack, coach of that Fordham foursome, who issues the first dissenting opinion we've heard.

"I know it will hurt Harry, but I wouldn't call it a fast track, let alone the fastest," said Bob. "The boards are too thick to get the same spring that you do from a track like that in the Garden; the track's been down too long, so that it's badly worn, and it's full of knots and bumps which are planned smooth at rare intervals."

Giebegack explained that his baton-passers had been able to run the mile in 3:15.2 at Dartmouth (compared to this year's Garden record of 3:18.6 set by New York U.) only because the Hanover track is six laps to the mile, that in the Garden 11 laps.

"That means only 12 turns to the mile at Dartmouth, compared to 22 at New York — and turns, no matter what anyone says, slow up a quarter-mile tremendously."

Giebegack, incidentally, has an interesting theory concerning indoor performances. He believes that, if a mile is run in 4:04.4 at Dartmouth, that should stand as a Dartmouth track record. If it's run in 4:07.4 at the Garden, that should stand as a Garden record. Conditions vary too much, he feels, to establish a set of indoor records.

ACTIVE ANCIENTS

By JACK SORDS

SEVERAL years ago Charles Henry Root was heard to say: "I'd like to stay in baseball as long as there is something for me to do."

There must be "something for Charles to do" for the veteran Chicago Cub pitcher, at 41 the oldest active player in the major leagues, still is tossing 'em in at the training camp, preparing for another season.

With Manager Gabby Hartnett, Charles makes up the oldest battery in the major leagues in years of service.

Good Record in '27

This will be Charles's sixteenth year in the big time. He joined the Chicago Cubs in 1926 after winning a total of 46 games in two years for Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast league.

DiMaggio Accepts Terms of Yankees

Believed Star Outfielder
Signed for $30,000;
Rolfe Also Signs

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, No. 1 star of the world champion New York Yankees, accepted the club's terms today, ending the Yanks' last holdout problem.

Notification of DiMaggio's acceptance came to manager Joe McCarthy by telephone from President E. G. Barrow in New York. No announcement was made of the salary terms, but it is believed here that DiMaggio accepted the club's offer of $30,000, a $5,000 raise over his 1939 salary.

McCarthy also was told that the star outfielder would leave his home at San Francisco early tomorrow morning for the training camp here.

Earlier in the day Red Rolfe, holdout third baseman came to terms for a reported $17,000. He also plans to leave for camp tomorrow from Penacook, N. H.

Advice to Bowlers

Grab a ball and heave it madly, Spare the ceiling and the walls, Halt the naughty words that hasten When one pin and no more falls.

If the pin-boys duck for shelter When you're up to roll a few, Do not let your heart be troubled, Someone, somewhere, wild as you.

If the marks are nearly even "Get your spare" they cry, and then Do not be afraid to face them When you leave up number ten.

Grab a ball and keep on trying, Shoot it down with "Atta-baby" If the five and ten split gets you Next ball's sure to get them, — maybe!

Annual City Swim Meet Is Set for April 5

Natalors from Three Schools To Vie at "Y"

Slight Alterations in Two of Program's Eight Events

The annual triangular swim meet between the three local high schools will be held Friday, April 5 at the Central Y.M.C.A. pool, beginning at 8 o'clock. It was announced last night by Edwin L. Kuhn, major domo of Athletics at the "Y".

At a meeting last night only Allegany and Port Hill were represented but plans were completed to include LaSalle which has taken part the past several years.

There will be eight events again this year, with slight alterations in the fourth and eighth. The 40-yard free-style will open the program, followed by the back-stroke for the same distance. Diving, with four requirements, is third on the bill. The acrobatic wave swimmers will be compelled to do front, back, back-jack and front half twists.

The 160-yard free-style relay (four men), plunge for distance, 40-yard breast-stroke, 40-yard free-style, and 120-yard medley relay complete the program. In the last event three men will take part, one splashing 20 yards back stroke, another, 20 yards breast and the third 20 yards free style. The front-diving half twist is the new event in the diving end.

At last night's meeting Eugene "Jake" Hopkins and John Comer represented Allegany and Kenneth Mowen and Blakely Martin, Port Hill.

The Spotlight

In front of all catchers—moving back to Bucky Ewing and on through Roy Brenahan, Marty Bergen, Ray Schalk, and Johnny Kling. He may be already there. Dickey is only a year away from the top peak back of the bat.

4. Ted Williams—The Red Sox Rookie of 1939 has his chance to reach even higher heights. He was the leading debutante of last year. He has everything it takes.

5. Robert Moses Grove—This Red Sox veteran, exactly forty-three old, can take the left-handed laurel with another good year. He has already been one of the game's marvels. He is shooting for a place alongside Rube Waddell, Herb Pennock and Eddie Plank.

6. Dominic Dimaggio—Rated High by California experts close to his brother Joe. The great, white spotlight is on him. He may need a year to find his place. Don't expect too much in his rookie year. Give him his chance to locate his bearings. If he hasn't the makings of a great ball player, then the West Coast is cuckoo. In their first starts with Detroit and Boston, Ty Cobb and This Speaker, respectively, batted under 250, in 1905 and 1907. There is still, in sport, no substitute for experience under fire.

7. How will Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, winners of fifty-two games last season, make out? What will happen to Johnny Vander Meer, the only pitcher in history to pitch two consecutive no-hit games—

8. Can Leo Durocher, who pulled off one of the star jobs of 1939, lift Brooklyn another notch?

9. How about young Charlie Keller of the Yankees—who has his chance to be another all-time star—serious, hard-working, clean-living, with the power needed for the modern game? Keller can move a long way up the line.

10. What will happen to young Bennie McCoy, the $45,000 rookie with Connie Mack's Athletics? He will be underneath one of the hot spots of the spotlight. He is another who deserves the test of experience.

11. What will Frank Frisch be able to do with Pittsburgh's undisciplined Pirates? You can't tell in one year. The Fordham Flash has deserved better than a one-year test.

This is only a partial round-up. In my opinion, the season of 1940 will present a program that should catch and hold the attention of many millions, for it happens to be loaded with possible high spots, with human interest, angles, that write their own stories for the multitude at large. And in this list you can include Joe Gordon, the Yankee second baseman, the most phenomenal infielder I ever saw.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

Winter Haven, Fla., March 5 (AP)—There is a fairly general idea in the New York Giants are an "if" club this year, with some of the more skeptical bunching all the little "ifs" together under one big "if" to the effect that "If that's a winning ball club I'm the Fourth of July."

The opinion is based on memory of the 1939 season, when Bill Terry's club suffered a slow leak and wound up a badly deflated fifth. Nothing went right, and the fans can't see how it could change into a winner on such short notice.

But Mr. Terry can, and he can almost make a believer of you, although down deep you know he is relying heavily on a couple of patched up pitchers, liable to fall apart at the seams at any time, and also that he has three uncertain infield spots dancing before his eyes.

Just time in a minute on the Terry hour.

"Frankly," he says, "I'd rather have this club than the one I started with last year. It's a different type of club, younger, and with more hustle and eager to improve. Why, I worked them about four hours today, and there wasn't a squawk."

"There's nothing wrong with our pitching staff. It's a good staff. Hubbell and Schumacher are like a couple kids out there. Vandenberg, is looking good. Castleman is working hard, and Gumbert and Melton are okay. Roy Jotner is going to be a big help. And Bob Carpenter is looking good."

"Babe Young will be our first baseman. If Zeke Bonura signs I'll carry him, but he doesn't figure in my plans. Young is a great hitter, a power hitter. He's a little clumsy catching the ball, but he catches it, he'll improve."

Soft music there, building up to the climax of the program. Mr. Terry's voice cracked with enthusiasm as he spoke of Mickey Witke, the second baseman from Newark.

"There's a ball player," he enthused, "You only have to look at him two minutes to know that. He'll make our double play combination. And he's a 156-game player. He's a good hitter, more on the singles order."

Jurges will take care of short, and it looks like young Glen Stewart, from Jersey City, at third, although Whitehead is trying for the job and looks good.

"Our outfield, with Ott, Moore and Demaree, and Dickshot also looks good, appears set, and Ott and Moore should have better seasons. Danning, of course, will handle the catching."

"It don't see why we can't click," he ventured thoughtfully, "but if we don't we'll just have to start building again."

The colonel is so obviously sincere in his hopes it's difficult to offer any rebuttal, but, conceding the veterans have a good year, the whole future simmers down to the ability of three rookie infielders to come through.

And it's usually a fairly long odds bet as to whether even one will make the grade in any given year.

Snap Two - Game Losing Streak with Victory over Keyser Colas

Keyser, W. Va., March 5 (AP)—Cumberland's classy Dragon basketball team snapped a two-game losing streak here tonight by whipping the Keyser Red Rock Colas 23-13 in the preliminary to the Potomac State- Shenandoah Joust. The game was limited to three quarters to allow the main tussle to start on time.

The Cumberlanders, paced by flashy Jimmy Stakem, who copped high score honors with ten markers, were behind 7-6 at the quarter mark but spurred in the second to outscore the locals 10 to 5 and hold a 16-12 lead at intermission.

The Cola crew was held to a single point in the third frame as the Dragons garnered 13 markers to turn the game into a rout. Compton, with four points, was the only one of the losers to bag more than one fielder. The summaries:

Smith and Runyan Fade Out of Four Ball Golf Match

Smith, Renowned Putter, Misses Less Than Three Feet from Cup

By LARRY ROLLINS
Coral Gables, Fla., March 5 (AP)—Horton Smith, one of the world's great putters, missed a wee one of less than three feet today as he and Paul Runyan, last of the seeded teams, faded out of the $5,000 international four-ball golf tournament.

The ball curled around the cup and hesitated on the lip but didn't go in—and so Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon play Billy Burke and Craig Wood in the finals tomorrow.

Metz and Laffoon both scored birdie fours to beat Runyan and Smith, four times finalists in the four-ball, one up, after 36 holes.

Wood and Burke came in from behind and won from Clayton Heafner and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, 4 and 3, in the other semi-final.

Metz and Laffoon won the tournament two years ago.

Complexion Changes
Smith and Runyan, who won the four-ball in 1934, ended the morning turn two up. Metz caught fire as the afternoon round got under way, rapped out a four-under-par 31 with five birdies on the nine-hole stretch, and sent his team three up.

The complexion of the match again changed as Runyan's putter blazed once more, and in three holes the match was square.

From there it was a dog fight. Metz's 30-foot putt for a birdie deuce won the 32nd hole. On the 34th Smith sent a 20-footer into the cup to even matters, the way they stayed until the payoff hole.

Metz and Laffoon with a pair of 65's, were 12 under par for the day. It was Burke, National Open in 1931, who beat Harrison and Heafner in the final analysis.

Heafner and Harrison ran up a quick three-hole lead in the morning, and were still two up through the 14th, when Burke's consistent iron shots began to tell.

Wood and Burke set a nine-under-par pace for the match.

Episcopals Down Methodists 47-23

Go Into Tie for First by Triumph over Leaders

Oakland, Md., March 5 (AP)—The Episcopals downed the league-leading Methodists last night in the Oakland church basketball league in easy fashion, 47-23, to gain a tie for first place as the season came nearer to its close. At the same time the Lutherans dropped an extra-period game to the Catholics. The game ended 40-40 after McComas of the Catholics put in the goal which tied the score just before the whistle blew. In the extra period the Catholics continued to score and the game ended 50-42.

In the Catholic-Lutheran fray the latter team was ahead at the half 24-21. Spoerlein led the Lutheran attack with 18 points while McComas scored 21 points for the Catholics.

Crane and Slayman led the Episcopal attack with 11 and 10 points, although six of the remaining ten who got into the game helped in the scoring. Mason was high point man for the Methodists with 9 points. The Methodists had previously gone into first place with a win over the Lutherans 35-31 last Thursday.

Thursday's games will see the Lutherans and Episcopals meeting and the Methodists and Catholics.

The season ends next week.

Washington Irving, "Forgotten Bride," One of Leading Favorites

Morgantown, W. Va., Mar. 5 (AP)—Drawings for the 27th annual West Virginia high school basketball tournament will be held here Sunday at 6:30 p. m., with C. A. Tesch, president of the State Board of Appeals in attendance.

Four teams in the eight regional sections will then play Friday and Saturday, March 8-9, with the winners coming here for the finals March 14-15-16.

One of the leading favorites for the title will be the "forgotten bride" of the event, Washington Irving of Clarksburg, which has qualified 21 times for the tournament and four times reached the finals but never once taken home the championship cup.

This year Clay Hite, an outstanding football and basketball star at West Virginia two decades ago, has coached another great team, one that has won 15 consecutive victories.

Washington Irving reached the finals first in 1927, only to be edged out by West Fairmont, 20-18. In 1930 they fell before the surprise Hundred entry, 20-24. In 1935 Elkins beat them 38 to 34 and last winter the Hilltoppers fell before West Fairmont again.

Cumberland-Franklin Bus Line Defends Unused Franchise

Charleston, W. Va., March 5 (AP)—The Franklin-Cumberland Transit Company, operating between Franklin, Pendleton county, and Cumberland, Md., appeared before the Public Service Commission today to defend its right to a bus franchise between Franklin and the Virginia state line.

The company, opposing attempts of three other concerns to operate over a route toward Harrisonburg, Va., told the commission it had always held the right to run buses to the Virginia line from Franklin, although no buses had gone over that route since 1935.

Several weeks ago the Town Bus Line of Harrisonburg, the Reynolds Transportation Company of Clarksburg and the Meyers Transit Company of Davis petitioned for certificates to operate. Meyers and Town wanted to operate from Franklin to Harrisonburg, while Reynolds sought a certificate from Elkins to Harrisonburg.

Income for First Eight Months Exceeds W. Va. Budget Estimates

Charleston, W. Va., March 5 (AP)—Governmental income for the first eight months of the fiscal year has pushed itself ahead of the estimates on which the 1939-41 state budget was based, experts at the state-house said today.

Biggest gains are gross sales and consumers sales tax collections, although there is a possibility inheritance taxes will take a sizable jump if the state wins the right to levy against the $12,000,000 estate of William McKell, deceased coal operator.

When the legislature makes up the governmental budget every two years, it has as a guide estimates from the budget director and other officials on what to expect in the way of income.

Gross sales taxes, more than a million dollars ahead of the same period last year, were estimated in 1939 to bring in $12,700,000 during this fiscal year. Already collections have been more than $10,000,000.

Jury Verdict Irregular, New Trial Is Ordered For Alleged Forger

Charleston, W. Va., March 5 (AP)—On the ground a jury failed to use in its verdict with specific charges in an indictment, Joseph Rummion was granted a new trial today on a charge of forgery.

Rummion, convicted in Roane county, was sentenced to two years after a jury declared "we, the jury, find the defendant guilty of attempting to pass a forged check."

The Supreme Court, in reversing the case, said the verdict was insufficient because in the case at bar the indictment is not mentioned therein, x x x if there had been added to this verdict the words "as charged in the indictment" or some similar connecting expression, we think it would be sustained."

The courts docketed for hearing an appeal by George E. Mewha from a Public Service Commission order granting the Penna Bus Company specified transportation privileges in the Northern Panhandle. Five companies are interested in a proposed bus route touching Wheeling, East Steubenville, O., and Weilsburg.

The Penna bus firm was given a certificate to operate along the route because it had lines in the vicinity and because of a franchise allowing it to cross the bridge to Steubenville. Other concerns did not have this permit. The case was placed on the court's April docket.

Mt. Savage Shops Of C&P Railway Are Re-Modeled

Buildings and Equipment Destroyed by Fire Completely Restored

Mt. Savage, March 5.—The Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad car and paint shops which were destroyed by fire Jan. 24, 1939, have been completely remodeled and restocked.

The outside walls, being constructed of rock were comparatively unharmed, but the entire interior had to be rebuilt and all the machinery replaced. The newly-installed machines are of the same quality and working capacity as those used formerly. The number of employees has neither increased or decreased.

Aside from improvements in the shops, the company is also installing a coal station a short distance from the shops, directly below the lower section of the Mt. Savage brick-yard. The station will be used for the hoisting and turning of engines and will be furnished with equipment to place fuel in the locomotives and conveyors to remove the ashes and cinders from the pits and place them in cars for disposal.

A water column will be installed to inject the necessary amount of water in the engines. The installation of this station means the discontinuation of the old tiple that the company formerly used. It also serves to centralize the operation of the shops and the railroad and make the industry more compact as well as more convenient.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

AT THE door of Terry's room Romany turned to Cholly.

"Will you let me go in first, Cholly? I've a message from Myra for Terry. And if he's very ill it might upset him more to see you."

Cholly nodded.

"All right, I'll wait here."

Romany knocked and a large, round-faced nurse opened the door.

"I've permission to see Mr. O'Rourke a moment," she whispered.

Nurse Boyer admitted her and went out.

"Terry," Romany called softly. "It's—Romany. I've come to see how you feel."

"Oh—Romany," Terry opened his eyes dully. Then he made a gallant attempt to grin. "I'm glad to see you, Glamor Gal."

Romany tried to smile back. "You sort of ran into something, it seems."

"Argument with a truck, and I lost," Terry closed his eyes again. "How's Cholly?"

"She's fine," Romany told him. "She's outside. I thought I'd better come in first and see if you wanted to see her."

"Sure—sure," Terry opened his eyes again. "Have you seen Myra, Romany?"

Romany nodded.

"Yes, she sent for me."

"Good!" Terry grinned painfully. "Guess the kid had a few things to get off her conscience."

"She asked me to forgive her and I told her there was nothing to forgive."

Terry smiled.

"Myra isn't a bad guy. She's had to climb up the ladder the hard way and doesn't want to see anybody take her place. I guess anybody would feel that way."

"Surely they would," Romany generously agreed.

"Tell me the truth," Terry said then. "Is she going to be all right?"

"I think so. It's her legs that are injured."

Terry covered his eyes with a bandaged arm.

"It's all my fault," he said hoarsely. "If she doesn't walk again, I'm potted, and she didn't want me to drive. But you know me when I make up my mind!"

Romany touched his arm sympathetically.

"You mustn't blame yourself too much, Terry. You must get well. Try not to worry about anything till you're stronger."

"I'll make it up to her," Terry's voice trembled. "As soon as I am well enough I'm going to ask her to marry me. I'm not much good—but—"

"Oh, Terry," Romany said happily. "I'm so glad! Myra loves you. She told me for the first time in her life she knows what love it is."

He bent and touched Terry's cheek with his fingers.

"I like you, Terry! And goodbye for now. I'll be hearing big things about your singing some of these days."

"Thanks, Glamor Gal," he grinned again. Then he closed his eyes wearily and Romany went hurriedly from the room.

Outside the door, Romany took Cholly's arm and led her down the corridor.

"He—thinks it's better for you to come later," she told Charlotte with great relief. "He's very tired. One visitor was about all he could stand today."

"He—he's going to be all right?" Cholly asked, wiping her eyes on her wrist of a handkerchief.

"I'm afraid so," Romany smiled. "Or he'd hardly be making wedding plans."

Cholly stopped.

Romany nodded.

"He's going to marry Myra as soon as they are out of the hospital. He says he guesses someone'll give him a break so he can support a family."

Cholly's eyes were clouded.

"Myra—oh, that'll never do!"

"Oh, yes it will," Romany smiled.

the coaching situation has been settled.

Head Coach Josh Cody resigned yesterday to accept the position of line coach at Temple university in Philadelphia, and there has been no announcement as to when a successor would be chosen.

Spring practice began February 5, and was to have lasted six weeks or more.

All-American Cage Team Announced

Midwest, Far West Dominate Madison Square Garden Olint

New York, March 5 (AP) — The far west and the midwest each placed two and the east one man on the Madison Square Garden All-American basketball team, announced tonight at the last of the college basketball games in the eighth avenue arena.

Picked by the seven Metropolitan coaches, from teams appearing here during the season, the first team has Ralph Vaughn of Southern California and Edward Risks of Notre Dame at forwards, John Dick of Oregon at center, and Jerry Steiner of Butler and Edward Milovich of Duquesne at guards.

The second team: Lew Pomeroy, De Paul, and Toddy Giannini, Santa Clara, forwards; Larry Kenney, St. Joseph's, center; Paul Widowitz, Duquesne and Stan Sunkala, De Paul, guards.

Ned Irish, director of basketball for the Garden also announced that Colorado University, champion of the Mountain Big Seven Conference, has accepted an invitation to the Metropolitan inter-collegiate tournament March 11-15.

sent me to see now you were. Terry grinned.

"Myra—said that? Well! Then I guess everything's all set. Maybe somebody'll give me a break so I can support a family."

Romany said fervently:

"Terry O'Rourke, if you settle down to your singing, nothing in the world can keep you from the top. If you stay sober—"

When she hesitated, Terry sighed.

"Listen, if a scare like this doesn't put a man on the water wagon, there isn't much hope for him. I'm cured. I've wrecked myself and injured a woman, for life. I've had my lesson."

"I'm sure you have," Romany's voice was warm with friendliness. "About—Cholly." Terry closed his eyes. "Did she take my busting up pretty hard, Romany?"

"She was terribly sorry," Romany assured him. "It happened just as she was about to announce her engagement."

The muscles in Terry's face tensed, but there was no other sign of emotion.

"I guess Hayworth is a pretty swell guy. Tell Cholly they have my blessing. But no man is good enough for my—Cholly."

"I know," Romany said sadly. "But Terry, this is all for the best. Would you like to see her for a moment? She is outside."

Terry hesitated, then shook his head.

"No, Romany—not yet. Not now. I'd kind of like to wait until I get used to the idea of marrying somebody else—and everything."

Romany choked.

"I understand. And so will Cholly."

She bent and touched Terry's cheek with her fingers.

"I like you, Terry! And goodbye for now. I'll be hearing big things about your singing some of these days."

"Thanks, Glamor Gal," he grinned again. Then he closed his eyes wearily and Romany went hurriedly from the room.

Outside the door, Romany took Cholly's arm and led her down the corridor.

"He—thinks it's better for you to come later," she told Charlotte with great relief. "He's very tired. One visitor was about all he could stand today."

"He—he's going to be all right?" Cholly asked, wiping her eyes on her wrist of a handkerchief.

"I'm afraid so," Romany smiled. "Or he'd hardly be making wedding plans."

Cholly stopped.

Romany nodded.

"He's going to marry Myra as soon as they are out of the hospital. He says he guesses someone'll give him a break so he can support a family."

Cholly's eyes were clouded.

"Myra—oh, that'll never do!"

"Oh, yes it will," Romany smiled.

"Myra and Terry have both learned their lesson. The hard way, as Terry says. He needs responsibility to spur him to do things. He blames himself for injuring Myra and feels he must take care of her."

"I've a strange feeling they'll make a go of it. Myra's helplessness has touched the one chord in Terry's Irish heart that will make a man of him."

Cholly smiled suddenly.

"I think perhaps you're right. He needed someone weaker than himself. Oh, Romany! I'm so glad for them both."

"So am I," Romany sighed. "And Myra will walk. Wait and see. She'll walk for Terry's sake."

Back at the farm, a beaming Baxter Tree ran down the steps to greet the girls when they drove up to the wide veranda.

"Romany!" He pulled her out of the car. "Oh, my darling!"

When Romany caught her breath, she said wonderingly:

"Why, Bax! What has happened to you?"

"My show!" He lifted her from her feet and kissed her. "Hal Trotter has sold 'Paradise'."

Cholly hurried into the house, leaving them alone in the falling twilight. Romany clung to him as if she would never let him go.

"I knew it," she said finally. "I was sure you would sell it, Bax. Now you won't go away!"

He kissed her warm cheeks tenderly.

"Not—if I'm not too late, darling. If I'm still in the running. Is there any chance of my using up a little of the time that Nelson guy has been taking so much of?"

Romany raised her lips.

"Oh, Bax! I've—a lifetime that's yours. All yours. You—blind darling!"

As Cecelia smiled from the window of the hall upstairs, Bax and Romany became oblivious to the world. Then Cecelia heard footsteps behind her and turned quickly. It was Brent Nelson.

A few moments later Romany remembered to ask:

"Oh, Bax—and who is our sponsor for 'Paradise'? Naturally, I'd like to know, since I'm to be your leading lady."

"Our lucky sponsor"—Bax kissed her again—"is a perfume guy. The Lenoir Perfume company."

Romany gasped. Aunt Cissie! Lenoir was the broken-down company Cecelia had bought in Paris and planned to move to Chicago. But she decided it would be just as well to keep the sponsor's real identity secret for the time being.

She smiled, and her green eyes were like emeralds. But suddenly she remembered Brent and what she must tell him, and a shadow crossed the radiance of her lovely face.

Charley Gehringer of Detroit May Quit Game

Lakeland, Fla., March 5 (AP) — Charley Gehringer, veteran second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, said today that he may retire from baseball unless a back injury heals.

The 36-year-old star quit practice abruptly today with the announcement that "if this continues I'll go home."

Detroit has no substitute for Gehringer since Benny McCoy, his understudy last year, was declared a free agent and sold himself to the Philadelphia Athletics. If Gehringer is unable to play Manager Del Baker said that he would shift either Ralph Kress, Boyd Perry or Dick Bartell, all of whom are shortstops, to the keystone sack.

Political Smoke, Sacred Music, Fill City Hall

Choral Group Sings While Politicians Keep Phones Busy

Choral music poured forth from the City Hall last night along with primary election returns.

Upstairs in the auditorium, members of the Community Choir lifted their voices in lilting song, and soothing sacred music was wafted through the building.

Downstairs, hordes of cigar-biting politicians milled about as serious-faced city workers tabulated primary returns from every section of the city.

Prayers and Curses

"Blankety-blank-blank" one Irvine man ripped out when partial returns from a South Cumberland precinct showed Mayoral Candidate Tom Post was whipping the pants off the mayor in that particular ballgame.

Upstairs the choir broke forth in a sacred tune, the dulcet tones cutting through that cigar-smoke laden atmosphere down below like a knife.

The throbbing music from above continued to pour forth and seemed a tacit reminder to the politicians below that there were better things to come.

Hard on Political Nerves

"Gosh, I wish they would stop," groaned one perspiring worker as he hung up the receiver on one phone and took off a receiver on another.

Early in the evening City Hall workers grinned widely and made jocular remarks as it appeared that Mayor Irvine was leading by at least two to one. Then the race began to tighten up. So did the nerves of the City Hall boys.

However, everybody kept brightening up when people remarked, "Shucks, there's hardly anything in yet. Wait until the real totals begin to come in here."

Phones Busy

Charley Burke, good-natured worker in the tax collector's office, was number one man at City Hall last night. Seated like a city editor with phones all around him, Burke kept talking into telephones for three solid hours last night.

Others working industriously were Charley Heller; Bill Buchholz, who kept sending the unofficial totals to Skip Wickard in the fire station by messenger boy; Andy Bender, spruce, and confident as ever; and scores of others.

Bill Edwards Grave

John J. McMullen was spotted talking seriously with grave-faced Commissioner Bill Edwards, who didn't seem to have anything to be grave about, as he was leading the council ticket of ten candidates.

Theodore George sat in the water office making predictions about this precinct and that precinct and hitting them pretty accurately too.

Tom Conlon, making a nice run for another term on the council, kept bounding from one office to another, speaking to one person for a couple of seconds and then bounding off again like a jack rabbit.

"Lot To Do"

"We've got a lot to do," Tom declared around 11 p. m. when unofficial returns showed that Candidate Post was making a pretty nice run. "Jiggs" Burns, Cumberland reporter, strolled in smoking a big cigar, grinned broadly as he tabulated the returns, "Jock" Murrie was another reporter who kept watching the situation closely all evening.

Mayor Irvine had not showed up by 11 p. m. last night. City Attorney Charles Z. Heakett, smooth and imperturbable as usual, sauntered in several times and then took off again.

Election Boss Keeps Calm

City Clerk S. E. Griminger, election boss, was the quietest man in City Hall, but kept a keen eye peeled to see that the tallying moved along smoothly.

Mary Clay, secretary to the mayor, was on hand as were a number of other City Hall girls. Miss Clay, an old hand in political affairs and primaries and elections, refused to get excited.

As the votes kept pouring in, speculators began talking out of the corner of their mouths, started figuring where Candidate John Harper's vote would go in the election.

The music upstairs finally stopped and the singers went home. But the counting continued until the wee small hours of the morning.

Riverside 4-H Club Boys Plan Vegetable Gardens

Members of the Riverside 4-H Boys Club are busily engaged on garden projects, it was announced last night.

Eighteen members of the club met Monday night at the home of John Barton, McMullen highway, and discussed the program under the leadership of Assistant County Agent H. W. Beggs.

Each member submitted a plot of the vegetable garden he planned to plant.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Extend Steel Prices

Pittsburgh, March 5, (P) — Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, largest subsidiary of U. S. Steel Corporation, extended to the second quarter today its present domestic prices on hot and cold rolled carbon and alloy steel products.

The announcement said the prices apply on shipments to and including June 30, for delivery and consumption in the United States. Shipments after June 30 will be involved at the price prevailing at that time.

Irvine Lacks

ated in no uncertain terms that City Hall's highly geared machine has a fight on its hands with Post shaping up as a much stronger contender for Mayor Irvine's job than was generally expected.

Political observers were more than a little surprised at the showing made on the West Side by Post and Harper combined.

In the four precincts of the First Ward, where it was thought Irvine would make something of a clean sweep, Post and Harper combined picked up 598 votes—only 237 less than Irvine.

On the other hand, Irvine made a better showing in seven precincts of South End's Sixth Ward than was expected, observers said.

In this, his own territory, Post garnered 1,570 votes, but the mayor picked up the creditable number of 723. Harper polled 360 votes in this ward.

Home Building Ends in Tragedy, Tree Falls on Young Husband

A young husband who went into the woods after his regular working hours to cut timber to build a home for his wife and baby daughter died yesterday in Memorial hospital after a falling tree had fractured his skull.

Victim of the home-building tragedy was Earl Knippenberg, 28, of 103 Fifth street, an employee of the Pen-Mar Brick and Supply Company.

The accident occurred late Monday evening on his father's farm, two miles from Cumberland on the Oldtown road, where he, too, had planned to build his home.

The seriousness of the accident was not realized at first, for Knippenberg was able to walk the mile to his father's home after the tree had struck him. He was assisted part of the way by Millard Robertson, 21, of Oldtown road, who had been helping him fell the timber.

He was admitted to Memorial hospital about 10:30 p. m., and died at 7 a. m., about twelve hours after the accident.

His companion said Knippenberg had sawed through a twelve-inch pine and had stepped aside as the tree started falling. The falling tree hit another tree, however, and swung around, hitting Knippenberg on the head as it came down.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Nancy Huff Knippenberg, and a two-year-old daughter, Vickie Lee; his parents, Steve and Leona Irons Knippenberg; two brothers, John and Ernest, at home; and two sisters, Mrs. Candace Hatfield, of LaVale, and Mrs. Margaret Holler, of Oldtown.

Mr. Knippenberg was a member of Davis Memorial church. His body has been taken to the home of his parents.

Members of the chamber's social committee will meet today at 11:30 a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce offices to make final plans for the dinner, Mr. Smith said.

Rep. Starnes, one of the most colorful figures in Washington, will speak on the subject, "Americanism." Due to his work on the Dies committee, Starnes is regarded as an authority on subversive supposed to be at work throughout the country.

Mr. Smith assured reporters yesterday that Starnes would "not pull his punches" in delivering his address.

Cumberland business and professional men have already indicated a great interest in the address Rep. Starnes is scheduled to make, Mr. Smith said. All indications point to one of the biggest spring meetings of the chamber in years, the secretary said.

Goodrich Appointed Judge by F. D. R.

Washington, March 5, (P) — Herbert F. Goodrich, University of Pennsylvania Law School dean, was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be a Judge of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

Goodrich would succeed Francis Biddle, who became solicitor general. Earlier this year Guffey had recommended Judge Michael A. Musmanno of Pittsburgh for the same court, but the vacancy was filled by Biddle.

Teacher's Auto Frozen in Ice; Council Billed

Water Main Burst, Froze Car Fast To Garage Floor

Frostburg, March 5—City council was called on to foot a novel bill last night.

Miss Elizabeth Workman, an Avilton school teacher, who lives on Maple street here, asked the mayor and council for a "settlement" for her inability to use her automobile for three weeks last month.

Miss Workman's claim was that her car was frozen in six inches of ice in her garage floor late in January and wasn't extricated until Feb. 17.

The ice formed, she said, when water overflowed Maple street after a city main burst in front of the residence of Mrs. Margaret Winner.

Miss Workman said she notified Mayor Olen Gunnitt of the condition immediately. The mayor, who was ill, referred her to Street Commissioner Walter Powell.

After considerable delay, a crew of WPA workers came to the garage but were unable to dislodge the car, the teacher went on. Finally, on Feb. 17, she said, William Wilderman, a city employee, succeeding in freeing the car from its icy grip.

During the three weeks her car was literally a "frozen asset," she incurred liabilities as well as hardships, Miss Workman declared. Not only did she have to pay extra for transportation to and from school, but she also suffered from the cold braving wintry blasts while standing along the National highway in Garrett county awaiting transportation home, she stated.

Miss Workman described her automobile as virtually necessary to her livelihood.

After listening to the detailed complaint, the council instructed her to put it in writing itemizing her extra expenses, and mail it to City Clerk Roland A. Lammert.

Council indicated that it would give the matter "careful consideration" after receiving the written statement.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Sixteen-year-old girls don't need paint to enhance their natural beauty, but the same reasoning does not apply to the Cumberland Free Public Library despite the fact that it celebrated its sixteenth birthday last week.

So mourned Miss Mary G. Walsh, the institution's capable and veteran librarian, who pointed out that the library, although only 16 itself, is housed in a 90-year-old building, which is in sad need of paint.

The need for the paint job is well-recognized, but one thing after another has conspired to prevent the proposed beautification from being accomplished.

The library has the paint on hand, and a WPA project has been approved to slap it on. All this over a year ago.

Chief hold-up at the moment is the fact that there is no master-painter on WPA rolls to supervise the job.

Library officials are wishing no one any bad luck, but are hoping that some master-painter may become eligible for WPA so that their long-delayed painting can get underway.

If the master-painters continue to prosper so that they don't need public assistance, chances are that the library, tired of the delay, may dig into its own funds to have the building painted.

We join the library and its friends in hoping that the needed job may soon be done. We certainly hope it's completed before another birthday rolls around.
